THIS IS written in California, after a day spent rushing through Real Estate, in a fast blue Chevrolet, driven by William Packer, sales manager for Los Angeles. Next stop will be at San Francisco, traveling on Paul Shoup's "Lark," the fast Southern Pacific night train.

Mr. Packer says: "Don't go by train; let me drive you to San Francisco in this car and I'll guarantee to beat the 'Lark' by three hours."

When conservatism decides not to make the 800 and odd miles in nine hours of night riding, in the Chevrolet Blue Bird, Mr. Packer says:

"All right, I'll take you to the train and leave you there and meet you at the San Francisco station tomorrow morning."

If you don't want to buy another car, keep away from William Packer of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge celebrated Tuesday the 22nd anniversary of their wedding, with all the people's good wishes. This land means opportunity. Twenty-three years ago he was a young lawyer; she a very young school teacher. Now he is President of the United States, and but for four words, "I do not choose," would remain in the White House four years from March 4, 1929, making a ten-year term in all. President Coolidge looks 22 years older than he did 23 years ago. Mrs. Coolidge looks not one year older, as many friends of her girlhood will testify.

California, every American should come here, in his "See America first" program, surprises you, always in different ways, whether you cross from the Atlantic to the Pacific for the first time, or, like this writer, for the one hundredth time.

A good housewife would be interested in these two signs:

Fat hens 22 cents a pound.
Three dozen large fresh eggs 77 cents.

The housekeeper's husband would want to know that King C. Gillette, who makes razors and blades, has bought the northeast corner of 6th and Olive streets, Los Angeles, for one million four hundred and seventy thousand dollars. Somebody else bought it about ten years ago for three hundred thousand dollars. Gillette got just as good a bargain as the other buyer did.

J. L. Stack, who knows how to live, shooting ducks and wild geese on the edge of the Pacific, at the same time growing richer and richer from his business in Chicago, says: "Tell young men that this is the time to move West. You walk over a bridge after others have crossed, then you know it is safe.

"In old New York days when Vanderbilts were making their few dozen millions, and when Russell Sage his fifty millions, people thought, 'These times can't last.' Now Sage and Vanderbilts are interesting beginners. The Rockefellers, Bakers, Mellons, are beginning to show how money can be made.

QUINCY KILLER SOUGHT IN 2ND SHOOTING BY SAFE GANG IN DEDHAM

A Quincy man, who is alleged to have made a statement, while intoxicated, that he was wanted in connection with the murder of Reserve Officer Alfred N. Hollis, was arrested on suspicion today in Woonsocket, R. I., and held for grilling by Quincy police.

Captain Daniel H. Doran and Lieutenant George W. Fallon of Quincy rushed to Woonsocket by automobile to question him.

His arrest occurred while police were launching a widespread search for two safe-crackers who "shot it out" with a Dedham policeman today when he interrupted them as they were breaking into a safe in that town.

According to Roscoe C. Hill, State fingerprint expert, the prints of the suspect arrested in Woonsocket are on file here in another connection.

The suspect told the police he was in Woonsocket to visit a girl. Questioned, the girl told of meeting him by appointment at the railroad station last night and accompanying him to the movies, but she denied knowing much about him.

He is said to have talked of the Quincy murder to a taxicab driver and to have remarked he was wanted for the crime, but when grilled by Chief of Police Cole of the Rhode Island city he denied any such statements.

The attempted robbery in Dedham today came a few minutes after the pair of crooksmen had

RESCUES MAN, BURIED ALIVE, IN BURNING DUMP

Completely buried in ashes and earth, Thomas Manning, 37, of No. 11 Granite avenue, Dorchester, was rescued by fellow-workmen and firemen from an excavation at No. 93 Pierce avenue, Dorchester, today.

Extricated from his living tomb by the frenzied efforts of his rescuers, Manning declared he must continue to work, but was sent to the City Hospital by the police.

The incident revealed the curious fact that the dump where the accident occurred, had been on fire under the surface for years and is still smouldering.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—Once again today the clan of moiling Miller Huggins scuttled the Pirate craft "Donie Bush," and the Yankees sailed away with their second consecutive game of this 1927 World Series, as the 42,000 fans rocked and roared in the decks of Forbes Field.

The game was contested beneath a blazing sky.

For a time it appeared he would not be able to take his place in the lineup. He complained of his injury when he gripped his bat in practice but when time was called "Poosh 'em up" was on the job.

Lloyd Waner opened the game with a triple and scored on Barnhart's long sacrifice fly. Excellent running and a wonderful slide by Waner made three bases possible.

After two scoreless the Yanks came to life in the third session and counted three times. Combs, first up, singled to right and scored on Koenig's one-baser and an error of Lloyd Waner.

Koenig reached third on the miss and counted when Babe Ruth sent a long fly also to L. Waner's territory.

At this point Gehrig, one of the "home Run" busters, inserted a double to the right field bleachers. Meusel followed with an infield hit, and Gehrig, by fast hoofing, reached third and scored on Lazarri's fly to Paul Waner.

A double by 'Pie' Traynor was wasted in the Pirates' half of the fourth, as Wright, who preceded him, and Grantham and Harris, who followed, all lifted high flies for easy outs.

JUDGE ORDERS RETRIAL FOR STIFFER SENTENCE

New York, Oct. 6 (A.P.)—On 15-year-old cemetery bandit and confessed killer must stand trial again because the judge before whom he was convicted of second degree murder did not think a sentence from 20 years to life sufficiently severe. The jury had returned a verdict that would have left him eligible for parole in 14 years.

The youth, Benjamin Rider, three weeks ago fatally shot Patrolman Henry E. A. Meyer as the officer was taking him and his companion, Edward Reilly, to be confronted by two women who had been robbed while praying in a Glendale cemetery. The women later identified them.

POLICEMAN CHASES PAIR

tried unsuccessfully to open another safe.

The two men escaped after staging a running gunfight with Patrolman Robert G. Campbell in the heart of the town, arousing the entire district.

Campbell, with an empty gun, chased the yeggs after sending a passing civilian to headquarters for assistance. They disappeared on the New Haven railroad tracks, in the direction of East Dedham.

Methods used in the Dedham breaks were identical with those employed in the robbery at the Fill Brothers hardware store in Quincy early Tuesday morning, when Hollis was slain, at the Quincy Motor Company the same day, and at the Socony plant in Norwood on Wednesday.

THUGS TAKE CASH ONLY.

Their first break was at the office of the Fisher-Churchill Coal Company in Eastern avenue, near the centre of the town. After breaking a window and entering they found a huge, old safe, which looked too formidable and they did not try to open it. A small safe, behind a door in a corner, they apparently overlooked.

This office was ransacked by the yeggmen, who tossed papers and books about in a search for money. Like the Quincy robber they scorned to take checks and stamps.

Finding that safe-cracking tools would be necessary, they stopped next at the carpenter shop of George Withington, not far from the coal office, and, after breaking in through a window, took a sledge hammer, pickaxe and chisel.

The Dedham Lumber Company is situated about 700 feet from the coal office and on the same street. The yeggs went to a side window and removed the screen. They then took a pair of workmen's overalls from a pile of lumber nearby and one of them, wrapping these around his arm for protection, smashed in the window.

Once inside, they disconnected the telephone and, continuing their cautious method of operating, searched until they found a pair of white believer's gloves in the drawer of a desk.

STAGE PISTOL BATTLE.

These gloves belonged to the manager, Frank E. Glynn, and were kept in the desk for use when Glynn found it necessary to handle or inspect lumber.

They had attacked the safe, knocking off the combination and drilling a hole in the door, when Campbell heard them.

Campbell gave a graphic account of the gunfight to Captain Daniel H. Doran and Lieutenant John J. Avery of the Quincy police who went to Dedham to investigate in connection with the Quincy crimes. Chief of Police Sullivan of Norwood also went to investigate the Dedham breaks. All were taken over the ground by Campbell and Chief Totty of Dedham.

"It was 20 minutes or two when I walked down Eastern avenue and heard a scraping sound as of feet on gravel," said Campbell. "The sound was faint but loud enough to hear in the still of the night.

"I was then about 75 feet from the office of the Dedham Lumber Company from which the sound seemed to come. I hurried closer.

ESCAPE AMID BULLETS.

"As I approached the office, I directed my flashlight through the window. Its glare picked up the figure of a man at the corner of the building. I turned the light on him and he acted in a flash. He blazed away twice and ran.

"This fellow seemed no more than twenty years old and was wearing a raincoat. As he darted toward the swamp, the other fellow came leaping out of the window. Had I got nearer by that time, I would have been close enough to block him, but as it was, he touched the ground and ran, firing as he did.

"I fired six shots, three at the first man and three at the other, and followed the second man up the tracks and past a train that was parked there.

"In the darkness both men got away. I returned for help.

"The second man wore a raincoat just like his 'pal' did. No. 1 wore a cap, but the other wore no hat at all. The first man was tall, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches, while the other fellow was about 5 feet 6."

FAIL TO FIND PRINTS.

A search of the two places entered in Dedham revealed no fingerprints, and it is believed by the police that the pair had gloves before they found Glynn's, but apparently used Glynn's as a joke, leaving them beside the safe when they were frightened away.

Until last Monday night an employe of the lumber concern was sleeping in the yard each night, not as a watchman, but "to save room rent," according to his fellow-workmen. On Tuesday he took a room with a friend.

GUARDS STAY WITH GOV. FULLER'S FAMILY

Although more than a month's time has elapsed since the Sacco-Vanzetti executions, State police are still maintaining a watchful eye over the welfare of Governor Fuller and his family.

The Summer home at Rye Beach is closed and young Alvan T. Jr., popularly known as "Persh," can be seen taking his walk through the public garden, accompanied by an officer in civilian clothes.

BELIEVE FATAL FIRE WAS CAUSED BY SPARK

Preliminary investigation of the Hawkins street fire which caused one death today led to an opinion by Deputy Fire Marshal Timothy C. Murphy that the blaze was caused by a friction spark coming in contact with alcohol.

TOOLS USED BY SAFE-CRACKERS

BEACH GIVES HIMSELF UP

May's Landing, N. J., Oct. 6 (A.P.)—Willis Beach, charged with aiding and abetting in the killing of Dr. A. William Lillendahl, the South Vineland retired physician, today surrendered to the State police and was placed in the Atlantic County Jail here.

He surrendered before 9 a. m. on the outskirts of the town, in accordance with a prearranged plan of his counsel, Edison Hedges, of Atlantic City, who had promised police Beach would appear when wanted by the court.

Beach was well dressed and clean-ly shaven. He was rushed to the jail and newspaper men were not permitted to talk with him.

In refusing to permit Beach to be interviewed, Frank Harrold, chief of Atlantic County detectives, said: "No one will talk to him until after he is indicted."

Beach now is charged with being an accessory in the killing and Harrold's remark indicated to observers that an indictment on a more serious offence is proposed.

Beach later was taken before the Grand Jury investigating the case for identification. There he was faced by three men who said they saw a coupe similar to one owned by Beach leave the scene of the killing. It was not made known whether he was identified as the driver of the car.

Beach, who is a poultry raiser and a neighbor of the Lillendahls, was with Hedges when he gave himself up to Captain Carter and State Trooper Robert Woodward.

Willis Beach has figured almost prominently in the investigation of the killing of Dr. Lillendahl near Hammonton on September 15, as has the physician's widow, Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl, who has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury today. She is under $25,000 bail as a material witness.

Beach's name became connected with the case within two days after Dr. Lillendahl was found dead in his automobile with three bullet wounds in the head. After questioning he was held in $5,000 bail as a material witness.

VANISHED AFTER CRIME.

When police called at his home to take him to Hammonton to be identified, if possible, by three men who had seen a blue coupe similar to the one owned by Beach leave the scene of the killing on the day that Dr. Lillendahl's body was found, they learned he had disappeared. Failure to find him resulted in the police charging him with aiding and abetting in the killing of the doctor.

Subsequently Attorney Hedges was indicted on charges of spiriting away a material witness in the case and spiriting away a man wanted for a crime. Hedges had been quoted in the newspapers as knowing the whereabouts of Beach and of having advised him to remain away.

Hedges, however, denied these statements in open court and his case still is pending, although he asked for an immediate trial.

ADMITS LOVE LETTERS.

Beach, according to police, admitted before his disappearance that he had corresponded with Mrs. Lillendahl and that she had received letters from him under the name of Peggy Anderson. He also admitted having met her at a trysting place in a wooded section in South Vineland.

Murphy Wins Fight to Have War Vet on Ballot

John J. Murphy, Democratic candidate for Mayor of Somerville, will have the words "World War Veteran" after his name on ballot in Somerville municipal primaries Oct. 13, as a result of a decision of the election commissioners today.

Murphy declared last week that when he filed his papers for certification he was notified to leave the words off the ballot, and charged a plot to prevent him from participating in the election.

'BOOTLEG KING' SLAYS WIFE

Cincinnati, Oct. 6 (A.P.)—Mrs. Imogene Remus died in a hospital here today from a bullet wound inflicted by her husband, George Remus, once "king of the bootleggers," a few hours before her suit for divorce was to have been heard.

Mrs. Remus was on route in a taxicab to the office of her attorney for a conference when she met Remus in another car in a park.

Remus followed her, and, becoming alarmed, she jumped from the taxi and started to run.

SLAYER SURRENDERS.

Remus sprang from his machine, grabbed her and, pressing a revolver to her abdomen, fired one shot. Mrs. Remus' screams attracted other motorists, who took her to the hospital, where she died a few minutes after an operation.

In the confusion Remus left the scene and a short time later while detectives were searching for him, he walked into the central police station and surrendered.

A charge of first degree murder was placed against him and he was held without bail.

Remus was bitter against his wife. He told police he did not intend to let her "get away with what she is trying."

GIRL ACCUSED HIM.

Referring to his wife and Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., Department of Justice agent, whom he named as co-respondent in his counter divorce action, Remus declared he had "spent thousands of dollars" to find them together.

Remus' step-daughter, Ruth, 19, at the hospital declared Mrs. Remus had been in fear of her husband.

"Mr. Remus has beaten, mistreated and threatened my mother all through her married life," she said. "She feared something like this would happen."

She said Remus was greatly excited and cursed as he turned the gun on Mrs. Remus. The daughter was in the taxi with Mrs. Remus and saw the shooting.

WAS WORTH $6,500,000.

The quarrel of Remus and his wife goes back to his bootlegging, which ended with a prison sentence three years ago.

Reputed then to be worth $6,500,000, he paid out $1,500,000 in his defence and left for Atlanta with $5,000,000 salted away, some of it with friends who he since has charged cheated him of the money, and $1,000,000 in the possession of his wife.

She sued for divorce while he was in prison.

His answer and cross-petition charged her with intimacy with Dodge and alleged they had conspired to keep him in prison because his wife had made away with all of the money he left in her care.

Chicago, Oct. 6 (A.P.)—George Remus, who killed his wife in Cincinnati today, was for many years a leading figure in the legal profession in Chicago. The woman he shot was the former Mrs. Imogene Holmes, an Evanston divorcee.

The first intimation of Remus' friendship with her was received by the first Mrs. Remus in a stirring account in newspapers of a clash with a plumber. Remus was in Mrs. Holmes' flat when Herbert Young, the plumber, became involved in an argument.

Injured Man Won't Shed Trousers 'Til Officer Arrives

Red Bank, N. J., Oct. 6 (A.P.)—Louis Warskawsky, sixty-one, of Newark, injured when struck by an automobile, refused to allow attendants at Woodley Hospital to remove his trousers unless a policeman was present.

When the policeman arrived the elderly man extracted $2,230 from the pockets of his trousers.

"I don't want to take a chance on losing it," he said.

Warskawsky received three broken ribs when run down by the car near the station of the New York & Long Branch Railway.

RESCUE MAN IN 'LIVING TOMB'

la, No. 191 North street, North End; and A. Melanson, No. 8 Andrew street, Cambridge, was engaged in excavating for the foundation of a home to be built by F. J. Stowe.

The foundation was being dug in an old dump, and the men had gone down about ten feet when Costello and Manning, who were working together, discovered the wall was caving in.

"We both ran along the pit," said Costello, "and I managed to clear it, but Tom was caught and completely buried by tons of ashes and dirt."

Like a great wave, the fill swept over the fleeing man, covering him from the sight of his amazed fellow worker. Costello gave the alarm, and the other men rushed with shovels in hand to the rescue of Manning.

"We were afraid he was gone," Melanson said, "but we started to work right away. We had to be very careful where we drove picks, but in six or seven minutes we cleared Manning's head, and he showed he was alive all right by shouting: "Free my legs." Meantime, someone had called Fr. Scanlon from St. Anne's Church to administer the last rites, but it wasn't necessary.

The fire department was also notified by the police who had been called, and Ladder 27 responded, in command of District Chief James Ryan.

Working hurriedly, the firemen got a lifebelt under Manning's arms, hooking a tackle to it. Then Capt. James Stout, with Laddermen William Ryan and Frank Murray, joined Manning's fellow-workers in wielding shovels, having him practically free by the time a rescue squad arrived.

"How long was I buried," was the first question Manning asked, after being released from his prison. Informed it was only six or seven minutes that his head was covered, he remarked: "It seemed like a year." It took 45 minutes to clear him.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 6—Pursued night and day by the accusing spectre of the husband whom she shot to death because she believed that she could never measure up to his ideal intellectually, although she was a Smith College graduate, Mrs. Mary Hardy Folsom fled to the sanctuary of the New Hampshire State Hospital for the Insane, from which she had escaped nine years ago.

She sat on the veranda of Bancroft Hall in a black and white checked apron dress and read the newspaper stories of her remarkable career as a dual personality and her return to the hospital while Nurse Foley stood comfortingly by.

In her faded blue eyes the dumb misery of nine years alone with the ego of Mary Folsom with a guilty conscience made her stare beyond a reporter who attempted to question her. She had voluntarily returned to the hospital where she had gained some successes from her mental anguish after the crime in July, 1914, and from which she had escaped on April 1, 1918.

As Mary Rust, successful caterer of Troy, N. Y., she remained dead to the world about her and for self protection was forced to live the life of a recluse. She dared not communicate with friends, family or guardian, Dwight Holl of Dover, N. H., who has charge of her property and so she sought escape

BRIDE OF BOY BARES THREAT TO KILL HIM

The already disturbed marital affairs of the Gianni's of Revere and Lynn became even more disturbed today when Mrs. Lena Gianni, 25, who married her original brother-in-law three weeks ago, reported to the police he had received a letter threatening death.

Mrs. Gianni told Chief of Police Edward J. Tighe of Revere that her husband, Paul Gianni, brother of her first husband, who was killed in a gun battle five years ago, received the letter at the home of his mother in Lynn, where he is living since deserting his bride five days ago.

Thus far in the mixed-up affair, these things have come to pass:

Lena married Vincent Gianni ten years ago when she was only 15. The couple had two children before he was killed.

Subsequently, Paul Gianni wooed and married his sister-in-law on September 15, at Revere City Hall, with City Clerk Albert J. Brown officiating.

Mrs. Gianni reported to the police a few days ago that they had lived during their short married life in Revere until one night, less than a week ago, a man called at the house and told Gianni two other men wanted to see him. Paul left the house and did not return.

A report to the police by Mrs. Gianni that her husband had been kidnaped led to his being discovered living with his mother, Mrs. Sophie Gianni, in Lynn. Then it was

THRONG IN LAST TRIBUTES TO T. N. HART

The last chapter in the career of Thomas Norton Hart, "Boston's grand old man" and former Mayor, was written today when officials of State and city, together with many friends and former associates, paid their last tribute at his funeral.

The services, which were extremely simple, in accordance with the wishes of the deceased, were conducted by the Rev. Dudley Hayes Farrell of Lynn. There were no pallbearers because the former Mayor had outlived his old friends.

The Harvard Quartet sang "Still, Still With Thee," "Hpad, Kindly Light" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," and the clergyman spoke briefly of the long life and career of ex-Mayor Hart.

None among the mourners was more sincere than two old servants, Margaret McCarthy, who had been in the family more than 40 years, and Mary O'Keefe, with a record of 39 years' service.

The Hart home at No. 298 Commonwealth avenue was the scene of the services, and the great living room was filled with floral tributes. Among these was one from the teachers of the Thomas N. Hart School of South Boston. Another came from the children of that school.

A touching tribute was paid by Henry L. Marvin, letter carrier on the route, who was appointed to the department when Mr. Hart was postmaster of Boston. Day in, day out, Carrier Martin has been a visitor at the Hart domicile, and he made his visit to the end.

HUB BUSINESS GIRLS DIETING

Business girls eat less than business men and it is NOT because they lack the price.

A canvass of the city's popular eating places reveals that a "tasty but tasty" luncheon is the new code executed by Miss Industry today.

"Sandwich shops have sprung up overnight like mushrooms, in the last few years, substituting the mid-at-home and box meal supplied by mother," Morris Nadell explained.

"Girls are dieting these days. Their mothers knew nothing of that. A restaurant meal to them was like going on a spree when they indulged," the general manager of a chain of tea-rooms said.

"Business girls today are vegetarians. We have added more vegetables to our menus than ever before and it is the customary food in the main of her noonday meal.

"We make our desserts purposely rich and sweet and that is because the men like it so. Men are the greatest sweet-tooth indulgers in the world. No dessert however healthful and generous is too much for them and they usually dundicate.

"Business girls eat less than business men because they devote the major part of the hour to shopping," the manager of another chain of restaurants stated.

Eleanor Hanlon, of Allston, Helen Donahue, of Roxbury, and Bernice Rogers, of Brookline, agree.

'GHOST' DROVE MRS. FOLSOM TO RETURN

from memories in the perfection of bakery products made in her home at No. 28 Pawling avenue, Troy.

COULD NOT FORGET.

But Mary Rust was melancholy, depressed by financial reverses and with a mortgage on her home. She could not forget the Mary Folsom who was once the wife of a well-to-do lawyer of Somerville, Mass., member of the law firm of Powers, Folsom and Powers, and mistress of a beautiful home there.

Daily the struggle went on to merge the personality of Mary Folsom, cultured, educated victim of hallucinations because she loved her husband too dearly and had been hypersensitive since childhood, into the stolid personality of Mary Rust, quiet cook who must remain friend less in a city full of customers wanting to be friends.

Finally Mary Folsom won the struggle; the tie that bound her to Mary Rust snapped suddenly last Saturday night and at two o'clock in the morning the old personality began groping its way back to familiar scenes.

"Everything has been so unreal since I've been away," she told Dr. C. H. Doloff when she came back to the hospital after having first visited her guardian at Dover. "It was as though I have been living in another world; on another planet where I had no contact with those I had known in this life. I did not even bring a change of clothes with me, so first of all please get me something to change into."

LOOKS LIKE MARY RUST.

She was wearing a gray taffeta silk dress, travel soiled and out of style. Her frame is still large, she weighs nearly 200 pounds, but Time has laid a graying finger on her brown locks, parted in the middle and brushed severely back from a broad forehead.

Her neck is no longer the slender stem that captivated Henry H. Folsom when he met her fresh from Smith College in 1896, but is thick and red and her face is heavy with a tendency to double chin. She looks the part of Mary Rust, good cook, but there is in her eyes the mirror of Mary Folsom, love-sick victim of a misunderstood childhood.

"Her mainly is melancholia with abnormal ideas on certain subjects," said Dr. Doloff, "all during her incarceration here she manifested regret over killing her husband and seemed to live in another world. She talked when she left just as she talked when she returned—the same introspection and ideas she had when she persuaded laundry employes to stuff tissue paper in doors so they would close but not lock.

"She is above the average in intelligence and as a child learned easily and retained what she learned but was always sensitive and easily hurt by unkindness. She thought her husband intended to put her back in the McLean Hospital at Waverly, Mass., where her delusions first caused her to be placed and then marry another woman. That caused the tragedy."

So confident was Dwight Hall,

"Move On," He Said to Prince; and Wales Obliged

Folkstone, Oct. 6 (A.P.)—A Folkstone official is recovering from the shock of asking the Prince of Wales to move on.

A young man in an overcoat and wearing his cap at a jaunty angle drove up to the harbor quay just before the arrival of the steamer from Boulogne.

When he strolled past the barrier where passports are examined the official said:

"Are you a visitor?"

"Yes," the young oan replied.

"Then I'll have to ask you to go to the other side of the barrier," the official ordered.

"All right," the visitor replied, and walked away.

Mrs. Folsom's guardian, that she would return eventually as she had once before done when she escaped from the New Hampshire hospital in male attire stolen from the mending basket that he did not dispose of her property during all these years but has kept her comfortable fortune intact.

She is a woman of unusually high ideals and tender heart," Dr. Doloff said. "We shall keep her under close surveillance and if we find that she is sane, of course she will be discharged. At present she exhibits the same signs that she did when worried after the unfortunate affair caused by a disordered brain. Bancroft Hall is the building where cured patients live until discharged by the hospital.

BORIS TO WED GIOVANNA

London, Oct. 6 (I.N.S.).—Official circles in Rome were engaged today in completing arrangements for the imminent betrothal of the Princess Giovanna, third daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, to King Boris of Bulgaria, according to a Daily Mail dispatch from the Italian capital.

Although official confirmation is lacking, well-informed circles reported that the announcement of the royal engagement would be forthcoming, as soon as certain religious difficulties were ironed out. The princess is a Roman Catholic and Boris is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Reports were that discussion of the religious question was the object of the visit of King Boris to the Pope yesterday, the Bulgarian monarch hoping to arrange a solution similar to that used when the Italian Princess Mafalda married the Prince of Hesse, a Protestant.

RETH'S SON, 14, HURT BY CAR

John A. Reth, 14-year-old son of State Commander John W. Reth of the American Legion, was seriously injured today at the Forest Hills Terminal. He was struck by a trolley car operated by Albert A. Ward.

The boy, who lives in Roslindale but has been staying with his grandmother at Forest Hills during the absence of his father and mother at the legion convention in Paris, stepped from behind a concrete pillar into the path of the car.

He was picked up, semi-conscious, and was rushed to the Forest Hills Hospital, where physicians said they feared he had suffered internal injuries.

Charges of larceny against Richard H. Long, former Democratic candidate for Governor, were dismissed today in municipal court by Judge James Parmenter after a bench hearing.

What went on at the bench in the way of conversation was not made public.

Long, who is treasurer of the Bay State Garage & Sales Co., was represented by Judge J. McAnarney, and the Massachusetts Securities, Inc., was represented by John Doyle.

The former candidate was arrested in the courthouse corridors a number of days ago by Police Inspector Jack Dorsey on complaint that he had secured money on automobile leases illegally.

DEATH PLOT IN LOVE MIX-UP

lerned Gianni, instead of being 21, as he stated at City Hall, was only twenty.

When Gianni is alleged to have refused to return to his bride, the younger Mrs. Gianni brought two suits for $10,000 each against her mother-in-law and her sister-in-law Nellie Gianni, alleging alienation.

Today at police headquarters the bride showed a letter to Chief Tighe and said her husband had called on her last night and given it to her.

The letter, written in Italian and bearing a postmark of the North Postal Station in Boston, was translated by Police Inspector Dominic Church to read:

"Dear Friend—I wish that you leave that woman as I have known her for four years and I do not wish you to eat at any same table. If you listen to me it will be better for you, if not your head will be where your feet are now.

"I have gone to see her and have seen what she had. I saw so much that I went wild. I will not abandon her even if I have to eat dirt, because I am the father of three children myself. It is now one week that I have not seen her, and the way she is physically is a shame.

"To let you know that whenever I have told her to come with me, she did so. So watch out, because your brother is younger brother, Joseph Gianni shall also pay, sell you one thing, and that is to go away and if you don't take my warning and I do as I said You Shall Get Killed. This is the last time that I shall write you."

"P. S.—You know how everything stands as the flag now points to you."

NEW CHANDLER HOME READY

"Boston, the style Athens of America!"

Dedicating themselves to the ever-demanding variety in fashions for women and sounding the latest boom in New England business, the new Chandler & Company building will throw open its doors to the general public in a few days.

"Boston isn't behind the times, especially where the women are concerned," said an official of the 117-year-old concern, which today ranks with the finest in the country.

"The Hub is a great traveling center. Hordes of people come here to buy, relying on the choice of Boston-bred merchants for their wearing apparel. Boston must keep pace with the styles," he explained. "Ours is the newest venture in the past five years. It is outstanding in a big way since the building is on the finest street in the city. Retail dry goods stands improvement the same as all other business. London is doing mercantile wonders in Regent street.

CUSTOMERS AIDED.

"It is our ambition to fill the big demand in Boston and it is due to the admonition, suggestions and encouragements of our customers. New England is a wonderful place for business and Boston must keep in tune with the world.

"Boston women want style in dress. They have been educated by the department store. They demand the best at moderate prices in wearing apparel and dry goods."

The great store is a landmark of beauty at the corner of Tremont and West streets, and in architectural parlance, it is a beautiful structure of Indiana limestone of the post Renaissance period.

Much of history and tradition does the site retain. Its history includes the famous home of the noted Boston family, the Lawrences. It revives reminiscences when they lived in Colonade row in flower-decorated houses of Colonial design, and when stylish ladies drove about with a carriage and a pair of spirited horses.

In keeping with this, the new Chandler's has many things of beauty and of the unusual.

CARE IN SELECTION.

Three months were spent in the selection of the style of the show windows on the first floor. A canvas of department stores in principal cities was made by the architects before the exhibit windows were selected. They are made from imported Caen stone, gray and rose, polished like marble, carrying a freize of bronze work, with medallion centers designed after Roman coins picked up in Italy.

Another feature of the first floor is its elaborate gold and bronze Spanish staircase to the floor below, transformed in the Galleries, or Spanish Galleries, making an effective and captivating display room.

Everything in women's apparel is to be found in the new building. Coats for women, for misses, dresses for women and misses, coats and dresses for junior misses will all be important sections in the general scheme. Ten floors have been taken to bring to Boston women all that will delight them in feminine frills and fancies.

From the finest ranks of business, men and women department store vision have been recruited to carry on the ideals and principles so carefully laid down by the men who in the early years established Chandler's as a buying center for Boston women. Two hundred and fifty new persons will come to Chandler's with the opening, while employes have been honored with promotions for their years of service.

TRUCK CRASHES NEW CLINIC

While pedestrians fled a heavy chain-store delivery truck, loaded with several tons of ice, ran away today down the slope of Dorchester street, South Boston. No one was injured.

At the end of its terrifying flight, the truck jumped the curb at Dorchester and West Fourth streets, crossed the sidewalk, ripped away 40 feet of iron fence and crashed into the new clinic set up under the George Robert White Fund.

Then the truck slowly and ponderously rolled over, dumping out the big cakes of ice.

John W. Holland was the driver of the truck.

Beauty Queens Balk at Speed in Love

"What happens to the beauty queens of the nation?" This query naturally arose following the recent action of the National Council of Catholic Women, who condemned beauty pageants as detrimental to the morals and future ambitions of the girls who enter such contests. The following is the fourth and final article of a series having to do with the American beauties.

New York, Oct. 6.—Beauty contest winners, who are invariably besieged with marriage proposals, do not rush into matrimony.

They go on the stage or into the movies, or travel, or return to college to complete their education, but the one thing they don't do, as a rule, is to accept any of the millionaires who throw their hearts and their pocketbooks—at their feet.

Investigation reveals that of the six girls who have been crowned "Miss America" at Atlantic City only one has married, and she chose a young man she had known for years, long before she aspired to national recognition as a prize beauty. This exception to the rule is Mrs. Victor Cahill, wife of a well-to-do Washington, D. C., real estate man. When she won the first of Atlantic City's national beauty contests, in 1921, she was Miss Margaret Gorman, a pretty, blonde high school sophomore.

SHE'S STILL SINGLE

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell of Columbus, O., who was adjudged the most beautiful girl in America in 1922, and again in 1923, is still single. She is only 21 now and she confided that "there's quite a lot of time before I'll think of marrying." She isn't sorry she entered the beauty contests and doesn't believe they should be condemned as a menace to the morals of the young girl entrants.

"Maybe some girls do have exciting experiences from taking part in beauty reviews but not me," she said. "I believe most girls make the contacts they desire and have the experiences they are looking for. I've been to every review at Atlantic City since I won the title, except in 1927, and I've found that people treated me with as much respect as those I meet in my own home.

"Beauty contests are no better nor worse than the girls who take part in them. I've made only a few acquaintances among the girls who entered them but I have never known of any girl being injured morally as a result of the experience."

DOES HOUSEWORK

Miss Campbell lives with her father, taking care of the house work as her mother died last Spring. She hopes to return to Ohio State University next year. She still wears her brown hair unbobbed and is as slim and beautiful as ever. She reads a great deal, plays the piano and is a splendid swimmer. She has several young men admirers, but is not "silly" about any of them.

Ruth Malcolmson of Philadelphia, who was crowned "Miss America" in 1924, is traveling abroad. She is engaged in commercial photography and went abroad for the firm which has employed her, Her father, W. S. Malcolmson, is an iceman. She has an extremely young looking mother. Ruth still wears her golden brown hair unbobbed. She is only 21 now, very beautiful and of the athletic type. She rides, swims and is a good tennis player. She is also a member of the Immanuel Lutheran Church choir.

Marriage apparently is not worrying Ruth. She wrote her mother that the party with which she is traveling decided to cross the Mediterranean to see what the desert sheiks were like. "Those sheiks are not so hot," she wrote. "Nobody like the American boys."

The national winner in 1925, Miss Fay Lampkier, has succeeded in the movies on the Pacific Coast. She too, is single.

Miss Norma Smallwood, of Tulsa, Okla., "Miss America" in 1926 spent twenty weeks on a vaudeville circuit at $1,000 a week. At present she is not employed, being engaged in legal difficulties over future bookings. She has not accepted any proposals of marriage. She is extremely popular with the opposite sex. At the time she won the title she was wearing fraternity pins given her by three Tulsa boys. She lives with her mother, a real estate broker, in Tulsa.

The winner of this year's title, Miss Lois Delander, of Joliet, Ill., is appearing at a Chicago theatre filling a two-months engagement at $1,000 a week. She is only sixteen—"Too yong to marry." In fact, she admits, she hasn't given the idea of marrying a thought.

FIND PASTOR'S MISSING WIFE

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Mrs. Bascomi E. Forbush, missing wife of the pastor of the Canandaigua Congregational Church, was found early today about a mile from Esperance, a Schoharie Valley village, thirty miles from this city, State police reported.

Two troopers, who were being aided in their search by the Rev. Mr. Forbsh, came upon the woman near a roadside. She was able to walk to her husband's automobile

WALES GREETS LEGION PARTY

London, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales recalled memories of war days when he welcomed the American Legion "good-will party" today.

"You are as welcome here today as in the stress of times when we first saw you as soldiers," the prince said in presiding at a luncheon given by the councils of the British Empire Service League and the British Legion to the Americans.

Field Marshal Earl Haig, president of the British organizations, and Alanson B. Houghton, U. S. ambassador, were present. Howard P. Savage, retiring Legion commander, sat on the right of the Prince of Wales and Ambassador Houghton on his left.

Marshal Haig, speaking of the time when he had several American divisions under his command, said that to this day he was proud to have had such gallant fellows among his soldiers. Commander Savage responded in behalf of the Legion.

AFTER PERIOD OF TORTURE, MAN FINDS RELIEF FROM ITCHING

Skin now entirely healed

Charlestown (Boston), Mass., Dec. 18:—"Last June I had an itching irritation on my back, principally between the shoulders, and also on the back of my hands, extending to the shoulders. The skin was apparently clear of any disorder, but the itching was intense. After a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel there would appear two spots, about an inch apart, which bled from the effects of the rubbing. I used Bay Rum and other lotions before I tried your Resinol Ointment. At bedtime my back received a thorough washing with Resinol Soap and a very generous application of Ointment, after which I would rest quite comfortably until about two or three in the morning, when I received another application. A third upon arising would be enough to make me feel at ease during the day. Thanks to the above treatment, the trouble is now entirely healed." (Signed) John W. Matthews, 1 Crystal Place.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Shippen's Art Show Scheduled for Two Weeks at the Grace Horne Gallery.

MISS ZOE SHIPPEN IS A VERY BUSY YOUNG PERSON THESE days. Her first "one man" show is scheduled for two weeks in November at the Grace Horne Gallery. This clever and individual young artist plies her craft in portraits, done either in red crayons or in pastels, and has achieved a distinct fame. The red crayon is devoted to grown-up portraiture, and children are done in the pastels. From October 31 to November 12 Miss Shippen's legion of admirers may view her latest works.

IN HER GALLERY OF PORTRAITS ARE MISS DAI BUELL, LESLIE BUSWELL, Leighton Rollins and William Arms Fisher, among others. Commissions and preparation for the Independents' Show in New York, and the Copley Society Exhibition here will keep her hard at work for most of the Winter. The Shippens have a charming Summer home at Annisquam, not the least attraction of which is Miss Shippen's studio. She and her father, the Rev. Eugene Shippen, are its designers, decorators and builders.

WITH MISS ZOE'S FLAIR FOR COLOR, AND HER FATHER'S facility with wood carving and carpentering tools in harmonious conjunction, a studio of extraordinary beauty and unusualness is the result. They took over an old room, a laundry kitchen of hopeless prospects, and achieved wonders. Mr. Shippen lined the walls with panelling fashioned from the inside window shutters taken from Mrs. Shippen's old home down in Washington, a place called "The Oaks," and interesting as the one-time home of John C. Calhoun, now owned by Mr. Bliss, United States Ambassador to Sweden.

AFTER THE PANELLING CAME Miss Zoe supremely into the decoration scheme. Above the woodwork she covered the walls with that glistening gold paper the Chinese wrap about their tea for export, and Mr. Shippen has applied antique Chinese carvings here and there. The result adds to "The Casements" at Annisquam as inspirational a workroom as any artist might desire. The Shippens came up to their Brookline home only a few days ago, Mrs. Shippen and Miss Zoe arriving in town in time to greet Mr. Shippen and Miss Sylvia as they arrived home from abroad.

PLEASANTLY REMINISCENT of several seasons was the tea group asked to assist yesterday when Miss Mary Stella Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Gray, was formally ushered into the 1927-8 social picture. There were buds of this Winter, buds of last Winter and buds of two seasons ago on hand to serve the cakes and tea and lend enchantment to the picture. For good measure, a young matron or two was in the group. Miss Ruth Bayliss, sister-in-law of Miss Helga Gray in 1925-6, was in charge.

Miss Zoe Shippen, a youthful artist soon to have her first "one-man" show. She is the daughter of the Rev. Eugene Shippen and Mrs. Shippen.

OF THE BUDS (PALPITANT over the honor of serving) there were Miss Alice de Normandie, Miss Evelyn Ames, Miss Nancy and Miss Cynthia Means, Miss Rose Movius, Miss Hester Codman, Miss Rachel Codman, Miss Nancy Adams and Miss Katherine Howe. Miss Peggy Bent, Miss Joan Higginson, Miss Ellen Wales, Miss Jane Tucker, Miss Helen Seymour and Miss Josephine Jewell, having been in the social swim a season or two, are quite adept at tea duties. Mrs. Francis Fiske (Jane Noble) comes into the matron category, and so does Mrs. Frank Evans, who is the spouse of the British Vice Consul, and adds a bit of an official touch to the affair. Mr. Gray is British Consul General.

THE GRAYS PRESENTED their daughter at the Longwood Cricket Club, a pleasant environment for the semi-formality of afternoon tea. Mrs. Gray's costume was orchid, Miss Helga Gray (elder sister) wore a lovely, brilliant blue chiffon, and Miss Mary Stella Gray wore green chiffon that ranged from palest sea foam to soft laurel green at its fashionably uneven hemline. The sleeves were fingertip length, and she carried pink roses and valley lilies in delicate profusion.

IT'S SAFE TO PREDICT THAT Miss Mary Stella Gray is in for a gladsome Winter. Also that she'll be enormously popular. In this she'll be following family precedent. The Grays go everywhere and do all the interesting things that color so brightly the days and evenings of the leisured smart set. The Consul General rejoices in a family containing a mother and two daughters easily mistaken for sisters, and each as attractive and popular as the other two.

FROM SEVERAL STATES, even from far-away California, come guests to witness the nuptials of Miss Virginia Conway and Herbert Sherbrooke, on Saturday next. Many of them arrive in season for pre-nuptial entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Earle E. Conway, parents of the pretty bride-elect, are entertaining a large dinner group at the Hotel Somerset.

THE CONWAY-SHERBROOKE engagement was announced last Winter, on the evening when the Conways' second daughter, Miss Janet, had her coming-out ball. So the affair, a large party at the Somerset, had a special significance for both daughters. Both belong to the Junior League, and both have traveled much in foreign parts. The whole family goes abroad early each Spring and come back in the Autumn, so capitals and countries of the Old World are familiar stamping grounds.

energy, ambition, and enough money for a start will, in the next generation, show the East how to build real fortunes."

California real estate, stretching a thousand miles along the Pacific, is assessed at seven thousand five hundred million dollars, on a 50 per cent. basis. The nominal value is over fifteen billions. But oil now under California ground is worth more than fifteen billion. The soil in the wonderful Sacramento Valley, north of San Francisco, and the Imperial Valley, south of Los Angeles, and other California valleys and uplands is worth many times fifteen billions.

Americans have no more idea about the real value of their country than the Indians had when they owned it.

Spaniards, who turned California over to the Mexicans about a hundred years ago, and Mexicans that turned it over to us, will muse sadly reading these figures. But neither Spain nor Mexico would have created the California of today, or produced William Packer, a salesman whose motto is not "Manana," but "Sign Here."

With the Pacific Ocean pounding and grinding in front of you, an ocean in which the United States would be only a good-sized island, with California boosters booming all around you, it is hard to realize that other parts of the world really matter.

Germans, at this moment, are flying the Atlantic Ocean westward, "making the trip uphill," as the sailors say, wisely taking the Azores route.

Mexicans are settling political differences permanently, by shooting the men with whom they do not agree.

The stock market seethes and boils far away on the edge of the Atlantic.

As you sit here, in the Ambassador dining room at noon, you hear the radio far out in the lobby bellowing details of the big baseball game. It is three o'clock in Pittsburgh when it is only twelve o'clock here.

BUT even a national baseball championship or the score, 5 to 4 for New York, seems unimportant here, where the land on which you buy to plant oranges may turn into city corner lots while you think about it, or begin spouting oil if you dig a hole in it.

These United States are interesting, variegated lands. You should study them, and know them. A little car costing not much to buy, almost nothing to run, will take you anywhere and bring you back.

No excuse now to live in one place forever like a hotfoot sealed up in a vein of coal.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKS HOUSE IN MEDFORD

Fire and gas company officials, early today, began an investigation of the explosion of a gas heater in the residence of Alexander A. Warner at No. 78 Adams street, Medford, injuring one person, frightening several others and wrecking the two and a half story structure.

Miss Lillian Robinson, 27, a teacher in the Brooks Junior High School who was alone in the house at the time, was cut by flying debris and taken to the Lawrence Memorial Hospital for treatment.

The force of the blast rocked the neighborhood and shattered windows on each side of the Warner house. Stuart Cooper, living on the second floor of No. 80, next door, was knocked off a chair by the explosion.

The heater, located in the basement of the house, was blown through the first and second floors and crashed against the ceiling of the bathroom where Miss Robinson was preparing her bath. It then crashed back into the tub. Had the explosion occurred a few minutes later, the firemen said that she would have been crushed.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner and their son Joseph, were attending church services and were staggered at the sight of their wrecked home when they returned. The blast twisted the house out of shape, and moved the structure two feet off its foundation. One side of the building was torn from sill to roof. The floors were ripped up and the walls left bulging.

Windows in the home of Angus McLean, at No. 76 Adams street, and that of Mrs. Jane Gibson at No. 80, were also damaged. Stuart Cooper, a neighbor, and one of the first to arrive, with others rushed into the ruins and rescued Miss Robinson.

YOM KIPPER TO END AT SUNSET

Yom Kippur, the Hebrew Day of Atonement, which began yesterday at sundown, was continued today with fasting and prayer.

This holiest of Jewish days, ending the ten-day celebration of Rosh Hashannah, or New Year, was marked by services in all the temples and synagogues, many of them holding overflow meetings because of the throngs.

All the shops and stores in the Jewish sections of the city and through Greater Boston were closed

Winged Dancer

IN "FLYING TRIP"

Mary Corbett, Somerville dancer, who, with her sister Kay, will put into actuality what small town newspapers have long referred to as "flying trips." Monday the sisters will fly to Chicago, dance for an hour, then fly back to Boston to dance at the Club Chateau, the Hub's newest night club, that night.

DANCERS WILL FLY TO JOBS

The cymbals crash
And the dancers walk . . .

But Alfred Noyes to the contrary, the dancers no longer walk. They fly. Two Somerville sisters, the dancers, will do the flying—2,096 miles of it, made necessary by contracts calling for their appearances in Boston and Chicago within a few hours of each other.

Five months ago, Kay and Mary Corbett of No. 20 Walnut street, Somerville, put their distinctly feminine signatures to a contract stating that they agreed to dance before the Industrial Association in convention assembled at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, Monday afternoon, October 10.

Five weeks ago, the exact date of their Chicago engagement rather hazy in the background, they signed a long-term contract to provide entertainment at the Club Chateau, Boston's new night club, opening next Monday night.

The result is that both girls will board a Stinson-Detroiter at the Boston Airport at 6 a. m., Monday for a non-stop flight to the Windy City. They will wear dancing costumes beneath their flying clothes in order to save time.

FALLS TO DEATH AT FILM PARTY

New York, Oct. 6 (A.P.)—While a party celebrating his sale of a motion picture scenario was in progress early today, Paul Fairfax Fuller, 29, scenario writer and editor, fell to his death from a ninth floor window of the Park Central Hotel.

Detectives said they believed the fall was an accident.

Miss Helen Green, motion picture actress, in whose apartment the party was being held, could provide no explanation.

No eggs!
No oil!

HERE'S a fine example of that happy—but very rare—combination—a recipe which makes a dish more delicious and at the same time makes it less expensive. It's a most tempting salad dressing—unusually rich and smooth—yet it requires no eggs and no oil. That is because Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk is used.

Salad Dressing

1¼ cups Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk
½ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon salt

Into the milk beat the vinegar, then the seasonings. Allow to stand a few minutes until it stiffens.

Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk has a place all its own in cooking. It is really two ingredients in one—pure, fresh, full-cream country milk, blended with finest sugar. It is more than twice as rich as bottled milk, because most of the water has been removed. And it is far smoother than any mixture you could make at home, because of the special process by which the sugar is blended in. This extra richness and smoothness makes Standard Milk the best milk to use whenever a recipe calls for both milk and sugar.

Keep Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk on hand. Use it for desserts, hot breads, icings, candies, ice cream, etc. . . And by all means, use it in your coffee! At one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar, it gives coffee wonderful golden richness and mellow flavor.

Get Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk from your grocer today!

Mrs. Crabtree Says

"Learn to Depend on this New Food"—

Campfire Marshmallows transform many ordinary dishes into wonderful delicacies. They are made especially for culinary use and are used almost daily in many households. Always keep a supply handy. Order today.

Campfire Marshmallow Fudge Cake

2 tbsp. butter — 2 eggs — ½ tsp. salt
2 cups sugar — 2 cups cake flour — Milk
4 sq. bitter chocolate, melted — 2 tsp. baking powder — 46 Campfire Marshmallows

Cream butter and sugar, add chocolate melted. Put yolks of eggs in cup, add milk to make 1¼ cups. Add milk and flour alternately. Beat whites of eggs and fold in. Bake in 3 square pans lined with oiled paper.

White cake is baking, cut 46 marshmallows in four pieces each (12 marshmallows for each layer). Remove cakes from time as soon as they come from oven. Place marshmallows immediately between and on top of the cakes. The heat of the cakes will cause them to melt slightly and adhere to the cake. Cover with Fudge Frosting.

Fudge Frosting

2 squares chocolate — 2 tablespoons flour — 2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar — 1-2 cup milk — 2 tsp. grains salt — ½ teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate over hot water, add sugar, flour and salt mixed together and when smooth add milk slowly. Cook until it spins a thread one inch long. Add butter and vanilla, cool, beat until of the right consistency to spread without running and pour over the marshmallows. If frosting becomes too thick set the pan of frosting over hot water and stir until frosting softens and then pour over the cake.

RECORD CROWD AT COOKING SCHOOL

A record-breaking crowd of Greater Boston women attended the third day of the Martha Lee Cooking School, which is being presented at the Hotel Statler Ballroom for four days this week. Juggling the menus was the subject of Mrs. Crabtree's lecture and she made it most interesting in her usual spirited way.

Certainly, it was the most enthusiastic crowd ever seen in the Statler Ballroom for a hum of interested chatter pervaded the auditorium for an hour before the time set for the lecture and only ended when the audience indulged in hearty applause for Martha Lee and Mrs. Crabtree as they came out on the platform.

STUDENTS ATTENTIVE

Both these ladies certainly make every effort to give their guests a good time as well as an informative and educational afternoon to repay them for coming.

They watch with fascinated interest while a cake is made or a colorful gelatine salad mixed. They write eagerly in their note books on various phases of their housekeeping problems.

Many of the women who came yesterday and the day before were back today, and intend to return again tomorrow. It is quite possible that on Friday afternoon, it will be difficult to obtain a seat in the hall.

Mrs. Crabtree pointed out to the women the possibilities which are now available in the direction of convenience, efficiency and saving. She referred particularly, of course, to the exquisite equipment from Boston dealers which she had for her own use on the stage. As she prepared the dishes, she talked constantly, explaining everything she did, why she did it and what results might be expected from certain methods.

PROGRAM TOMORROW

Throughout the afternoon the women were closely attentive and apparently highly appreciative. At the end of the program practically all of them filed across the platform upon the invitation of Martha Lee in order to get a close glimpse of the equipment and the finished dishes prepared during the afternoon.

The program for the closing session tomorrow, announced, promises to be the most interesting of all. Arrangements will be made to accommodate early. Doors open at 1:30 o'clock. Then a musical program at 2:00 and the lecture begins promptly at 2:30.

"Good Morning"

As they say it on fine dining cars

DINING CAR superintendents, some months ago, met together at a banquet. It was held at the Book-Cadillac, Detroit.

"Do you serve La Touraine Coffee?" they asked. The hotel management confessed that they did not. But, by special request of the dining car experts, they ordered 50 pounds for that banquet.

That will tell you why breakfast on some extra-fine trains brings you such exquisite coffee. The dining car managers know. And they want to leave some pleasant memories to bring you back again.

So at many splendid hotels, famous inns, restaurants and tea rooms. So in fine country homes which study table delights. The question most asked is, "What coffee is this?" And more and more reply, "La Touraine."

Every home in this section can serve that same coffee, year in and year out, if they will. No extra cost, no extra trouble. Simply learn what is best, and insist on it.

Try La Touraine Coffee—order it of your grocer. Then, if it fails to surprise and delight you, we have nothing more to say.

Why they use La Touraine Coffee

Because it holds the top place in New England, the birthplace of fine coffees.

Because experts regard it the supreme result of 237 years of coffee development.

Because the four finest coffees that grow are combined in this blend. Each comes from a different country, each is the pride of a nation. Three of them cost 50% more than ordinary coffees. One is so rare that only 30,000 bags are grown yearly.

Because the blend is exclusive and secret. No other blend resembles it. Experts spent twenty years in perfecting this ideal flavor and aroma.

Because E. J. Butler, the noted coffee expert, personally tests and selects every coffee in this blend. Because La Touraine, despite its supreme quality, costs no more than other high-grade coffees.

At All Grocers

They serve it

In extra-fine hotels, like
Ritz-Carlton, Boston
The Kenmore, Boston
All Statler Hotels
Famous resort hotels
Hotel LaSalle, Chicago
The Stevens, Chicago
And many, many others
In the finest tea rooms, like
The Colonia, N.Y.
Both Vanity Fairs, N.Y.
On extra-fare trains
In scores of famous inns
In hundreds of country homes

JUSTICE WAITS FOR WEDDING

Providence, Oct 6—All the world loves a lover it is said, and so Justice of the Peace Charles T Lukey of Smithfield permitted a before-day joint arraignment of Francis LaPlante of Broadway, this city, so he could carry out plans to be married at 7 a m.

LaPlante had been arrested the previous night on a charge of embezzlement of $50 from a 17-year-old pioneer George Brothers, waits attempting to make a settlement with him.

The prospective bride, Miss Marietta J. Maher of Allendale avenue, visited LaPlante when he pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge.

The couple were married at 6 o'clock at St Lawrence chapel, Centredale, and left on the 8 o'clock train

RADIO DIALOG

by WILLIAM RUSSELL

ABOUT 3000 people can jam into a hall to hear a Symphony Concert. Ten times that number will normally hear it via radio. Thirty thousand radio listeners is a safe guess. The radio broadcasters like to think in terms of millions. So do we. But the millions do not materialize.

It is estimated that 200,000 radio machines are in operation in a radius of 40 miles around Boston. Allowing five persons per radio that makes one million listeners. With several stations, local, semi-distant, and distant we can estimate that each station had 100,000 listeners.

Now give each listener every other night off and low number per station drops to 50,000. If those people listen to any one station each night it's a good audience we estimate. Outstanding broadcasts and, as the coming season of symphony attract greater numbers.

Last night we caught part of the pretty Aeolian Hour from WEEI Rudolph Gans, and the Philadelphia Chamber String Sinfonietta did a good business in Chopin pieces.

George Hall's orchestra from WJZ is one we always like to listen to. WJZ fades in and out as if the musicians were drunkenly wavering to and fro before the "mikes." Reminiscences of the recent trade banquet.

Something odd under new arrangements is the Seventh Forester's wished up on our Kellogg. Myron Cross, Maurice Tyler, Walter Preston and Murray Sherrin have been favorites with the radio audiences of WJZ and WBZ for a long while. Last evening they showed no reason why Foresters should not keep them on favor.

The rest of the evening we just played around from station to station. Our new seven tube, electrified Kellogg No. 510 is selective and sensitive. Its reproduction is exquisite and we like its appearance. More about it some other day. We must become thoroughly acquainted first.

LABOR PLANS TO HAVE OWN 'RADIO VOICE'

Los Angeles, Oct. 6 (A P)—A radio megaphone for the "Voice of Labor" has been suggested in one of ninety-seven resolutions before the American Federation of Labor at its annual convention in session here.

The resolution, referred with the other proposals to committees of the convention, proposed the establishment of a great chain of broadcasting stations to be the unions. The cost of operation of an annual tax of $1 a member would finance the project.

Investigation by federal officials of charges that radio "is controlled and fast becoming monopolized by capital and vested interests to the exclusion of the rights and interest of organized labor and others," also is asked in the resolution.

Two resolutions centered their attack on the Sherman anti-labor trust law, one asking its amendment to prevent its application to labor, and the other demanding the repeal of the law.

A battle was promised on the question of Colorado river development, as California delegates asked that labor reaffirm its stand for development of the river "in the manner recommended by engineers of the Reclamation Bureau of the Department of the Interior," on the Boulder Dam project.

Other resolutions demand a minimum wage of $1,500 a year for Federal employes, elimination of convict labor, opposition to Fascist principles of government, support of the eight-hour day for seamen of the American merchant marine.

PLAN FESTIVAL FOR XAVERIAN SCHOOL

On Columbus Day the Xaverian Brothers of St Joseph's Juniorate will hold their annual festival on the grounds of their school on Antietam street, Peabody.

The festival will be an all-day affair, the program beginning in the morning at 10 o'clock and continuing all of 11 o'clock at night with a display of fireworks.

The principal attraction of the day will be the chance now in the making, which is being put on under the direction of John L. Devery of the Salem Country Club in Peabody and which will have four classes of golf.

A band will furnish music during the afternoon and evening and a football game will take place between St John's Prep of Danvers and a team from New Hampshire State University. A troupe of oriental from Lowell will furnish the entertainment to be given during the evening. It is even said that the fireworks will be one of the best displays ever exhibited in that vicinity.

There will be free parking space and also free transportation to be had from Peabody Square to the Juniorate Grounds every fifteen minutes. This year added facilities have been provided for the large gathering expected.

The affair is held annually and the funds raised are used to aid the Xaverian Brothers in their work of preparing boys and young men to become religious teachers.

The juice of 25 cherries

That tart, tangy fresh cherry flavor—you can't mistake it even blindfolded, for the actual juice of 25 perfect ripe cherries flavors every package of Royal Cherry Gelatin.

You will like it for its quivering tenderness—because it whips like heavy cream, because it has not the slightest trace of gummy odor or taste. You would expect this superiority of texture and flavor of a product made by the makers of Royal Baking Powder. Yet it costs no more.

Children adore Royal Cherry Gelatin plain or whipped or molded with fruit. Four other fresh fruit flavors: Raspberry, Strawberry, Orange and Lemon.

Aged Slowly

CONNOISSEURS of rare old wines know that slow ageing has much to do with the full mellow bouquet they prize so highly.

Makers of cheap extracts—they are not cheap in the long run—cannot wait for their products to age properly.

Slow ageing has much to do with the preference of the discriminating for Burnett's flavors.

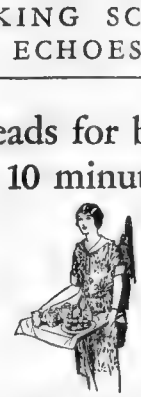
COOKING SCHOOL ECHOES

Hot Breads for breakfast in 10 minutes!



SINCE I have learned to make muffins, Johnny Cakes and other things the day before and reheat them quickly in the morning, we have hot breads all the time. And no one realizes that they are not baked fresh every morning.

I wet them (just a "dash" under the cold water faucet), heat them thoroughly in a covered pan, removing the cover a minute before serving to be sure they are dry.

I used to think that because hot breads require so little shortening they could be made with any odds and ends of fat I happened to have in the house. But one day, I made some muffins with Crisco and they were certainly the best I ever ate. Light, tender, with a wonderful flavor and appetizing smell. They were so much better than any I had made before that now I use Crisco for every hot bread I make, and I do get the most gratifying compliments on all my hot breads. They really could not be any better if made with the best, most expensive butter.

DELICIOUS PASTRY, CAKES AND FRIED FOODS, TOO

Crisco is by no means limited to making hot breads. I find that I can always depend on Crisco for flaker pie crusts, delicious cakes, dainty desserts—and for all frying.

Manhattan Muffins

When baked with Crisco, as light and dainty a muffin as you could imagine. For special occasions bake in tiny patty pans. Split each one, put in a piece of butter and serve at once. They make just one mouthful.

½ cup Crisco
¼ cup sugar
1 egg (beaten)
1 cup milk
1½ cups bread flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder

Cream Crisco, sugar and salt together. Add eggs, then milk. Last baking powder and flour sifted together three times. Beat until smooth, bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 25 minutes. If ordinary muffin tins are used, this recipe will make 12 to 15 muffins.

Johnny Cake

A real New England treat. If Crisco is used, this Johnny Cake will be light, tender and delicious.

¼ cup Crisco
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg (beaten)
1 cup thick sour milk
½ teaspoon soda
1 cup corn meal
1 cup bread flour
4 teaspoons baking powder

Cream Crisco, sugar and salt together. Add egg, then sour milk and soda beaten together. Last baking powder, flour and cornmeal sifted together three times. Beat until smooth and turn into Crisco-ed shallow pan. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 25 minutes.

[ALL MEASUREMENTS LEVEL]

CRISCO is used by Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree in the Evening American Cooking School being conducted this week in Statler Hotel Ballroom.

Crisco is the trade mark for a special shortening made of the best cooking fats, such as vegetable oils. Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

To test your cooking fat—taste it. Crisco's sweet flavor will astonish you.

The LIFE and LETTERS of WOODROW WILSON

RAY STANNARD BAKER.

Meeting With Ellen Axson Was Deep Awakening

CHAPTER 13

Copyright, 1927, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

WOODROW WILSON'S experience in Atlanta was at least one of self-discovery. And he was then, and always afterward, a swift learner. He wrote afterward to Ellen Axson that a man "must know the times into which he has been born, and think I did not know when I left college and chose my profession . . ." He sees the changes that ha. come about with the passage of the frontier life and by reason of the war.

"It is plain to see why lawyers used to be the only politicians. In a new country, in communities where very man had his bread to earn, they were the only men (except the minister and the physician) who stepped amidst the general hurry of life to get learning, and they were the only men, without exception, who were skilled in those arts of forensic contest that were calculated to fit men for entering the lists at political tilts, or for holding their own in legislative debate. They could hope too, when a turn of parties might have come, or their own popularity might have waned, to return to their places at the bar to find a place still open for them to find themselves not altogether and hopelessly crowded out: they could even, like Webster and Jeremiah Mason and many others of less genius, make law and statecraft live and thrive together, pleading causes in the courts even while holding seats in the Senate or leading parties in the House.

"THOSE TIMES PASSING."

"But those times are passing away. A man who has to earn a livelihood cannot nowadays turn aside from his trade for intervals of office holding and political activity. He cannot even do two things at once. He is constrained by a minute division of labor to bend all his energies to the one thing that is nearest at hand. Even in the law men are becoming specialists. . . . Whoever thinks, as I thought, that he can practice law successfully and study history and politics at the same time is woefully mistaken. If he is to make a living at the bar he must be a lawyer and nothing else. Of course he can compass a certain sort of double-calling success by dint of dishonesty. He can obtain, and betray, clients by presenting a knowledge of the law which he does not possess, and he can often gain political office by the arts of the demagogue. But he cannot be both a learned lawyer and a profound and public-spirited statesman if he must pluness into pro-

NOLI, HUB MAN, DOOMED TO DIE

American Plans Free Kiddies' Circus

FETE WILL BE HELD ON COMMON

A very nice lady came into Boston today, and in behalf of the Boston Evening American arranged a circus for the kids of the Hub at 4 p. m. next Tuesday.

Why didn't May Dowling and Mayor Nichols and the Shubert and "Poodles" Hannaford and the family do those things when we were a bit younger and liked horses and clowns and the like.

The circus—and listen well, you of Boston's youthful—will take place in all its antics and fol-de-rols on Boston Common

It is free as the air in which it will be held, and every youngster from here to anywhere at all is invited to be present and enjoy the most fun he or she has had in many a day.

LOTS OF LAUGHS.

If you are big enough you will remember—and if you are not big enough you will be glad for the new experience—"Poodles" Hannaford and the family of horseback riders who bump and glide and slip and slide around on horses in the funniest and most clever way.

They will do all these things next Tuesday on the ball grounds of Boston Common—and the chances are 1000 to 1 that "Poodles" trousers will slip their braces and he will be very much embarrassed over the glee ensuing.

In "Poodles'" family there are the leader himself, Mrs. Poodles, Elizabeth, George and the smartest trapeze performer, all as comical as you can imagine.

NO PAIN AT ALL.

On Tuesday night you will go to sleep with laughter and no bad dreams will follow.

The Shubert brothers—J. J. and Lee—have furnished the laugh-making James C. Morton as master of ceremonies and he is guaranteed to double up his kid audience as chortles double, never did. His doubling up will be accompanied with much less pain too—no pain at all, in fact.

It's up to you kids—and this is said in confidence, even before the gala show begins—to send a vote of thanks to Shubert Nichols, May Dowling, the Shuberts and the "Poodles" family.

This show will be that good!

You can send your letters when to "The Circus Princess" which opens next Monday at the Shubert Theatre, after a year in New York and five years in Europe

BISHOP TO DIE FOR REVOLT

London, Oct. 6 (INS)—An Albanian court martial has imposed death sentences upon Bishop Fan Stulan Noli, former premier of Albania, and eight other Albanians, one of their agents, as a result of a revolutionary proposition, according to a Central News dispatch from Vienna today.

Fr Noli, who was Premier in 1924, has been one of the most spectacular figures in European politics since the overthrow of Albanian State was declared a republic. He is a graduate of Harvard and founded the Independent Albanian Orthodox Church in Boston a few years ago.

Fr Noli spent about five years in the United States. After the war he headed the Albanian National movement with a big seat in the opposition to Premier Zogu. He represented Albania at the League of Nations meetings and stirred wide public interest through his ironical speeches

Bishop Noli was a member of the class of 1912 Harvard. When his classmates generally addressed him as "Fan" He was admitted as a lower man into the Greek Orthodox church and studied for the priesthood

In 1908, while a "peaceful revolution" was taking place in opposition to Sultan Hamid, an independent Albanian Orthodox church was founded under his leadership.

DOWAGERS WALKED OUT AS ISADORA DANCED

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF ISADORA DUNCAN
By FRED TOYE
Chapter 19

ISADORA'S affairs, even at times of greatest prosperity, never ran smoothly. She purchased a charming studio in Neuilly, just beyond the Bois de Boulogne, outside the gates of Paris.

The studio was admirably adapted to the dancer's needs, with its great space for dancing. The living quarters were commodious and comfortable. A delightful walled garden surrounded the studio and shut it away from the street.

Unfortunately the River Seine decided to give the dancer a warning of its winter power, and Isadora awoke one morning to find her studio flooded knee deep with muddy water.

On the Rue de Varenne, just across the street from the Lavalière there was located the immense property known originally as the Hotel de Biron, ancient family seat of the Biron family, and more lately known as the convent of the Sacre Coeur. The property, covering several acres and walled in from the street, occupied an almost entire block, main buildings, dormitories, stables and a huge refectory.

With the expulsion of the religious orders, this property, like other church property in France, had come into the possession of the government. It proved to be a white elephant, however, owing to the fact that it was heavily mortgaged. The state was obliged to meet the interest payments, and there were few uses to which property of the sort could be put.

The sculptor, Rodin, had taken over a suite of parlors in the deserted main structure, where he worked and instructed his pupils. Isadora took the great convent refectory for her studio. Here she developed her program for her Paris seasons.

Her work in the French capital was interrupted by a trip to the south of France, where her second child was born. Isadora wished to name the child for its father, but he objected, saying that one of his sons was named after him.

TOURED AMERICA

Isadora with a leaning for fresh names which had manifested itself in the naming of little Deirdre, determined, in consequence, to name the newcomer Patrick.

In the Winter of 1910, Isadora returned her dancing in Paris, where she was received with tremendous ovations at the Chatelet Theatre The Chatelet season was followed by a tour of America with Damrosch. On this tour, most of the large cities of the West and Middle West were visited by the dancer and the orchestra. She was at the height of her fame and at the pinnacle of her artistic powers

Work in Paris was resumed in the Winter of 1911, and it was during the second series of performances at the Chatelet that Isadora's destiny shocked Paris.

During a Wagner program, Isadora had given instructions to the stage carpenters to extinguish all lights suddenly at a certain moment, and to bring them up from the darkness very gradually for the beginning of her following dance, the Ride of the Valkyries from "Tannhauser." While the lights were out, Isadora made a quick change of costume in the small one-piece dressing room to be found in most theatres in the wings.

Isadora was a skilful electrician, however, and she commenced to whirl the flimsy robe flew in the wind, held to the dancer's neck only by a thread of elastic.

A gasp went up from the fashionable French audience at the sight of the nude woman. With the utmost unconcern, yet without the least suggestion of lewdness, Isadora proceeded with her program. Several dozen matrons marched their daughters from the theatre. Most of the audience was startled with amazement, but the gallery, full of art students, went wild with joy.

The next day the stage was full of pell-mell editors and critics against a repetition of the scene. Isadora made a speech flaying the brutal repression of art, and the students took up a collection to buy her bushels of flowers in testimony of their devotion and their sympathy for her persecution.

The story of Isadora Duncan's greatest tragedy will be told in tomorrow's instalment of Fred Toye's account of the dancer's career

OFFICIALS HELD IN ATTEMPTED EXTORTION

Charged with attempting to extort money from a merchant by threatening to accuse him of driving while under the influence of liquor, Lieutenant Inspector Thomas Cody and Motorcycle Patrolman Henry J. Dwyer of Cambridge pleaded not guilty today in Middlesex Superior Court and were released under $2000 bail.

Police Chief John J. McBride of Cambridge announced that he would confer with Mayor Edward W. Quinn regarding the possible suspension of the two accused police pending their trial.

Three indictments were returned against Cody and Pelletier by the Middlesex County Grand Jury and the detailed charges contained in them were revealed for the first time at the arraignment today before Judge Pell.

The charges are as follows:

That on Sept. 5 and 11, Lieutenant Cody and Patrolman Pelletier verbally and maliciously threatened to accuse one Percy d'Alessandro of driving under the influence of liquor and parking without lights on Fresh Pond drive, with intent to extort money.

That the two policemen had conspired into a conspiracy to this end.

That between Sept. 5 and 11, they conspired together to commit extortion from time to time, as opportunities presented themselves, the crime of blackmail to convict persons of crimes with intent to extort money from these persons being unknown to them at the time of the alleged conspiracy.

WOMAN BURNED FIGHTING FLAMES

One woman was badly burned and ten families, including several children, forced to flee in their night attire early today when fire started on the top floor of a five-story brick dwelling house at Nos. 29-31 Hesseltine street, West End.

Mrs. Daisy Gorman, 42, was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital suffering from burns about the head, face, neck, arms and abdomen. Her condition is critical, but doctors said a new wound probably would not prove fatal. She was burned police said while trying to extinguish the flames with her bare hands. The fire started in her apartment, on the top floor.

Firemen found her trying to beat back the blaze and carried her to the street.

The fire was discovered by Harry Shore, occupying a suite on the ground floor. As he rushed to sound an alarm, Mrs. J. M. Cohen, on the fourth floor was awakened. Together they shouted the alarm to others in the house and vigorously pushed doorbells.

The cause of the fire was not determined. Damage to the extent of $2,500, fire officials said, most of it being confined to Mrs. Gorman's apartment. She lived alone.

The occupants included Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Downey and their son John, aged 7; Mr. and Mrs. William Bloomfield and daughter, Estelle, aged 2; Miss Cora McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cohen and daughter, Lillian, 18 months old; B. Radler and two children, Hyman, 8 and Anna, 12; Mr. and Mrs. L. Ruiman and two adult sons; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shore and three children, Leo, 15, Melvin, 7 and Etta, 14.

HUB DRY AGENT SPOTS 'SECRET SERVICE' MAN

A former Department of Justice agent, now attached to the Federal probation department here, today identified Thomas J. Brown, Jr., under arrest in Lowell on a charge of impersonating a secret service operator, as a member of one of the most notorious "shake-down" gangs in the East.

Officials in the Federal Building here withholding, for the present, the name of the newspaper man who made the identification.

Brown was taken into custody yesterday in a house in Dracut street, he is alleged to have displayed fake secret service credentials to support his promise of ability to offer liquor protection in return for a valuable subscription of $100.

According to the former Department of Justice agent, Brown is one of a score of impersonators scattered along the Atlantic seaboard, operating from a New Jersey headquarters.

The gang, according to the government informant, first appeared during the Sesquicentennial Exposition last year in Philadelphia, where, he asserted, they cleaned up thousands of dollars by representations to hotels, barrooms, alcohol distilleries and doctors that they could traffic "wide open" in liquor for a subscription to the "Federal Secret Service" Magazine.

Brown will be turned over to Federal officers today by the Lowell police to be arraigned before the United States commissioner in that city on the impersonation charge.

Three Win Commissions

Morris Miller Bauer of Newton, Richard Chase of Lowell, and Paul Alfred Disney of Beverly are among 84 second lieutenants appointed in the regular army from the ranks as announced by the War Department today.

TOTAL OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASES 705

Twenty-one new cases of infantile paralysis reported today to the State Department of Health brought the total for the year up to 705 cases. The highest number on record was in 1916 when 1,927 cases were reported.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO SUE LEVINE FOR $500,000

Washington, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Government action to recover approximately half a million dollars in connection with war contracts faces Charles A. Levine on his return from Europe, unless the transatlantic flier effects a settlement out of court before then.

Documents for a civil suit have been completed by the Department of Justice. The case grows out of freight charges on materials which Levine sold for the government on a commission basis. The government claims Levine took the freight charges out of the government's share of the proceeds of the sale.

Worth Looking For

JENNEY GASOLINE

Thousands of motorists would gladly go out of their way to get Jenney Gasoline. But they don't need to, in Eastern New England. The highways are dotted with Jenney Stations, where you can always receive helpful, attentive service, as well as Jenney Gasoline and Motor Oils.

Look for the Jenney Sign, the sign of courtesy and quality. Stop in at the nearest Jenney Station at any time, for air, water, information, or any other convenience. Gas and oil if you want it—friendly attention always.

'BROADWAY' TO BE FILMED BY UNIVERSAL

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6.—Universal has purchased the screen rights to "Broadway." This little piece of news comes as a terrific surprise, for no less than five companies were bidding for the privilege of filming this play when I was in New York.

There is an interesting story told about the sale of "Broadway." Robert Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, managed to get the stage producers to listen to terms. Then came the question of Carl Laemmle. He was in Europe. Mr. Cochrane was afraid to wait for a cable, so he telephoned to London for Mr. Laemmle's permission to close the deal. It is given and now Universal is all set to film their latest production.

They tell me at Universal City that "Broadway" will be produced on a lavish scale with an all-star cast. The way they do things in the film business these days is nobody's business—telephoning across the Atlantic and everything.

WISE men change their minds. Fools never, so they say. Anyway, Cecil De Mille has changed his mind about Rod La Rocque's next picture enough times to be classed as Solomon.

First it was "Hold 'Em Yale," then it was "The Blue Danube" and now after another consultation it has been decided that Rod will begin work on "Stand and Deliver," written for him by George Fouy, superintendent of the De Mille ranch.

Donald Crisp will direct and Sada Cowan and Howard Higgins will prepare the scenario. It will be Ralph Block's first job for De Mille as supervisor. I wonder if the question of who should be first entered into the "Blue Danube" Leatrice Joy was supposed to co-star with Rod and it's usually a difficult job to please both stars.

"HOOT" GIBSON, who has been flirting with several European companies, will be in our midst for at least one more picture. He is calling his next opera "Hey, Rube." Good title, isn't it? It won't only be a hayseed picture however, for they tell me there will be a circus in it.

Joe Andrews will do the directing and Dorothy Gulliver will play opposite Hoot. Hale Henry is the chief comedienne. That's all.

WHAT with all the high-brows in the literary world coming West and all the writers hitting the trail for Hollywood, I am not in the least surprised that Andrew Bits has been signed by Fox to write comedies. Who is Bits? Did you ever see George White's Scandals? Well, he's the young man who wrote the last spasm. He is now writing on "Woman Wise." There ought to be plenty of wise cracks.

COUNT any day utterly lost when Samuel Goldwyn doesn't have an idea whereby he can break into print. Now comes a yarn from his office reading: "Will Ivan Petrovitch, Vilma Banky's first leading man in Europe, become her leading man when she and Ronald Colman part company?"

"Has he been made an offer?" I asked naively. "No," said the politepress agent who brings in the yarns, "but it is a good story anyway."

Alphabet Guides This Snow Forecaster

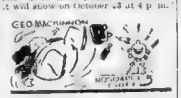
By PAUL FRANCIS "SNOWMAN"

John Prescott is a well-lettered guy. He worked over the alphabet until he discovered it would snow first hereabouts on October 23 at 4 p. m.

It can be easily seen that, with such a clever feat tucked away in his consciousness, John has had no association with a fat Wisdom Editor named MacKinnon, who can't stand snow because he falls so hard.

"How did John Prescott do it?" you ask, and the "Snow Man" answers in a very clear explanation, mostly "quotes":

"'S' equals (almost) 'Sun.' 'O' equals (nearly) 'October.' 'W' is the 23rd letter of the alphabet. 'Snow has four letters. 'S-N-O-W' all follow 'M' in the alphabet. Therefore, it will snow on October 23 at 4 p. m."



That's what John, who lives at No 17 Winthrop street, Stoneham, says, and you may storm at it if you will.

You can see for yourself. She says the coal chutes are all in, and this is, perhaps, the first instance of a private family being wealthy enough to own its own personal coal mine.

MOORE NEVER DREAMED HE'D BE IN 1927 SERIES

By DAMON RUNYON

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—In his farmhouse, down in Oklahoma, last Fall, sat a big, raw-boned, horny-handed tiller of the Oklahoma soil eagerly listening in on his radio to the exciting details of the World Series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees.

The neighbors looked in on Farmer Wiley Moore occasionally and asked:

"How's she going, Wiley?"

I presume that Farmer Wiley Moore, at that time, didn't dream that he would be farming radio fodder himself for Dan Hershberger of the Trib a year later, but he is doubtless the case.

I hope and trust that the neighbors of Farmer Wiley Moore were listening in to hear how the boys stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates in their tracks on the first day, and helped the New York Yankees win the first game of the World Series of 1927 by the score of 5 to 4.

Farmer Moore came on in the eighth inning of the pitching after two of the best three men on the staff of Waite Hoyt and Herb Pennock, have taken the count in the American League campaign. The Pirates got upon Hoyt like a thief in the night, but Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates, became of some doubt as to the advisability of letting Hoyt go on to the end. He stood in deep need of a lot at that time, I gathered, but he was rather reluctant than have it supplied by Cuyler.

CALL FOR CUYLER.

Late in the game the Pirates set up a plea for the presence of Hazen Cuyler, and Cuyler was the outfielder who, tonight in Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates, became of some doubt as to the advisability of letting Hoyt go on to the end. He stood in deep need of a lot at that time, I gathered, but he was rather reluctant than have it supplied by Cuyler.

Cuyler was knocked down for the count of nine when Hoyt got the ball over the heart with a fast one, and Cuyler was not in the ring when the count was completed. Cuyler is a right-hand batsman."

Bush refused to answer further questions when he was asked who he would send up to bat for Cuyler.

Whatever the outcome, it is likely to be the last of Cuyler as a Pirate outfielder. Bush has intimated that he will not keep Cuyler on the payroll next season.

Cuyler, who batted .357 during the season, is a left-handed batsman.

The majestic Mr. George Herman "Babe" Ruth was counted on for something out of the ordinary, but he confined himself to three hits.

True, they were important, but they were not home runs, and the crowd could not see why a man who hit sixty home runs in the season shouldn't produce at least one for them. It must be said for Ruth that he tried nobly, however. He wasn't able to get any lift under his drives.

CALL FOR CUYLER.

Late in the game the Pirates set up a plea for the presence of Hazen Cuyler, and Cuyler was the outfielder who, tonight in Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates became of some doubt as to the advisability of letting Hoyt go on to the end. It seems that Wiley Moore was in such severe jams during the stages of the pinch of his work that Farmer Wiley Moore as to give the latter the return.

MOORE IS O. K.

However, the folks down in Oklahoma can rest assured that Wiley did O. K. in spite of the big league language he ever saw, but some paleface in

He speedily developed astounding prowess as a relief pitcher, but Miller Huggins the assistant manager of the Yanks, adopted a system of weighing the big farmer in the preliminary training camp and one of his reasons for considered one of his reasons for pitchers.

LIKES COMPANY.

Wiley Moore seems to pitch his very best under conditions of stress. He has a sort of "he-man" ball that keeps the batsmen hitting into the dirt. He is as cool as any salesman that he ever faced in his garden patch down in Oklahoma, and maybe cooler.

Wiley Moore finds nothing distasteful in a big crowd, and hostile shouts. In fact, he is never glad to see the boys and gals there. They keep him company.

Feminine Eyes Focused on Traynor and Gehrig

By CORINNE RICH

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—Lou Gehrig and "Pie" Traynor, famous bachelors of the Yanks and Pirates, respectively, focussed feminine attention on the big game.

What women and there were many, many here—does not love a nice young man trying to get along in the world?

Lou and "Pie" are just that good looking, young, unusually well educated, and too interested in the girls, and completely to love with their mothers.

Lou's devotion to his mater far outweighs his penchant for home runs so far as women admirers are concerned. And "Pie's" little white haired mother, who travels around with him, keeping house and seeing he gets to bed by eight o'clock, has added unchronicled volumes to her stalwart son's popularity.

Young Mr. "Pie" in fact, is a "model" boy, the sport writers say, with not a bad habit to speak of and any number of virtues.

So the women followed the diamond doings of this Lou and this "Pie" with equal enthusiasm, no matter how the hitting stood.

Wives of the players, scattered throughout the grand stands, were looking elsewhere. They had their own particular favorites to watch and they were all to their seats long before "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

Washington, Oct 6 (A.P.)—The probable postponement of cancellation of the football game Saturday between Howard and Hampton Institutes, negro colleges, was indicated by the Howard University Athletic Board as a result of the decision of the latter institution's gridiron squad because the players were unable to meet the college authorities' terms in payment of fees.

"BABE RUTH is hitting and so the Yankees won the first game of the world's serious," remarked Mr. Boston today. "The Bambino busted out three singles, which is a fair day's work for anybody. After the big fellow gets the range, he may be expected to sock out a few home runs.

"Nick Flatley tells me that if the Babe keeps hitting the Yanks can't lose. There's something contagious about one of Ruth's hitting sprees. It always causes his teammates to go out and hand the apple a flock of punishment.

"When the Babe is hitting, everybody on the Yankee team seems to go on a batting spree. It was the same when the Bambino was on the Red Sox.

"'Let Babe start hitting them and we can lick the world,' Everett Scott, former shortstop ace, once told me. 'But when the Big Bam is in a slump we are all deadwood.'

"Wonder what the reason is for this condition of affairs. It may be due to the fact that when Ruth is walloping the old pill that he takes all the fight out of the opposing pitcher and makes him less effective against enemy batters.

"The Yankee batters also get steamed up when Ruth is socking 'em. They want to emulate the big fellow.

"REMEMBER the 1914 Braves? Stallings piloted them to a National League pennant and they then stepped in and beat the Athletics four in a row. They were smitten by the idea that they couldn't lose. Today would pull off impossible plays in the field, and even supposedly weak hitters were potent to the star pitchers. They felt they couldn't be beaten and so weren't beaten.

"I think the Yankees feel much the same when Ruth is riding on the crest of a batting wave.

"With the Yankees out in the lead, the Pirates are going to have a hot time halting the Bruggins crew. Ruth should keep right on hitting, while Lazzeri, Koenig and the rest of the outfit can also be depended upon to show real batting ibe.

"RUTH has always stood up in the big money shots. He is more liable to knock a home run when the stands are jammed than when there is only a handful out at the baseball orchard. Big crowds spur him on instead of cracking his nerve.

"A great many of the stars of our national pastime have proved busts in world's serious games. They have felt they had to come through and as a result have flopped. Even the great Ty Cobb failed to a.. so when he had his opportunity in the Blue Ribbon classic between the Tigers and the Cubs.

"May Babe keep hitting 'em. I believe even the National Leaguers want to see the Bambino smash out a few homers. Ain't Babe has a habit of doing that which is asked of him."

HARRIS HOPES LADY LUCK WILL BE FAIRER

By JOE HARRIS
Pirate First Baseman

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—Although I do not wish to detract from the champion qualities of the Yankees I'll state right now that I would rather see the first game of the World Series will never be settled to the contention that the New York boys were favored with good every break of the game.

Truthfully I will say that we were not favored. Three times we would have scored had it not been for close decisions that were against us. American League players are not down with the [illegible] any time a club scores five runs on six hits, they have to be lucky. If we had scored five to win under the same conditions, our players would be fair enough to say that lady luck had smiled upon us, but she surely did save her frowns for our side.

Some of the hot smashes off Pittsburgh bats were hit so hard that batters could not go from first to third on the blows. Coombs picked up a couple of hot singles that were "killed" and the runners had to pull up at second.

The members of our club felt that we had a good chance to stop the Yankee boosters, Ruth and Gehrig were unable to get a long base, although Babe was a star with three singles.

Mental Test for Harvard: What Does Booth Mean?

In a telegram to Robert Stearns, general manager of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, who is handing the publicity for the Purdue eleven that plays Harvard on Saturday Booth Tarkington, famous novelist, says:

Purdue has been playing football for forty years that I know of personally, because I played there on the scrub myself almost that long ago. I played only one day, however, so it should not be held against Purdue.

As alumnus of Princeton, I HOPE THAT PURDUE MAY IN EARLY RESPECT TAKE PRINCETON'S PLACE IN RELATION to Harvard, beginning with this present friendly encounter.

The experimenting and testing stretched over a period of many years. At last Edison decided that it was time to begin manufacture of his new storage battery. He built a special factory at Glen Ridge, New Jersey. Using the batteries for power tests were made over the roughest roads. Still Edison was not entirely satisfied.

After thousands of cells had been sold and were giving satisfactory service, here and there a defective cell would show up. Edison went right after the problem. He was not satisfied that his battery was a complete success. True to his directness of action, he shut down the factory and started experimenting again.

Another series of heart-breaking experiments were started and lasted over five years. Heart breaking for all but Edison. His endurance and patience are almost unlimited. Now he had perfected a new idea and process.

This Day in Our History

ON October 6, 1683, the first German immigrants arrived and settled a few miles from Philadelphia in a place which they called Germantown. This date is observed by German religious organizations in America as an important anniversary.

Becky by RAYNER SEELIG

A Real Drama of Intrigue in Boston Theatrical Life After Curtain

CHAPTER 22.

BECKY did her best on the night of her return to the show, but while she skipped, kicked, and tried out the luscious words of "See Mah Ba Mamma in Paris, But She'll Always Be Baby to Me," a sharp sense of oppressive premonition weighed on her mind.

She chose to lay it to weariness; her leg still ached intolerably, and was relieved almost to the point of tears when the curtain fell for the last time and the shuffle of feet toward the exits was drowned by the rush backstage. The doctor's orders were to return to bed immediately after the show, and as Easterbrook was busy entertaining the visiting Lord Treverne, she was hurrying out alone when someone caught hold of her arm.

She turned impatiently to face Violet Vincent, her blonde hair tucked carelessly under a new straw hat of glistening jade green, her face so pale that the rouge on her cheeks stood out in brilliant dabs of orange.

"Whatsmatter?" Becky asked rather sulkily, for her old amusement still persisted "D'you want me?"

"Yes, I do," Violet replied. "I want to talk to you, Dolling. I've been trying to catch your eye all evening."

"Well I guess you're troubles will keep till tomorrow. I'm t'rodeo than a six day bicycle race."

"It's not my troubles," Violet said in a low, shaken voice, as she carefully dumped half the contents of a bottle of cheap perfume down her neck. "It's your own."

Violet spoke feebly's arm, and Becky looked down, quick to see a glimpse of something like desperation in the Kiss's eyes. Abruptly her dislike gave way to sympathy, and she said mild & sarug. "All right, what is it?"

The dressing room was almost empty, but Violet whispered mysteriously: "Not yet. I fixed it with the night man to let us stay for an hour after the place is cleared. It's got to be private."

The two women were silent, then, until Violet had completed her toilette. By the time the dressing room was deserted and Violet, having looked in the wings outside to make sure that they were alone, took herself back into a chair and began with an air of great self-possession. "Becky I know you never liked me, and I never wasted much love for you, either But you'll have to admit that I warned you once to lay off this fellow Estabrook"

Becky, indignantly: "You mind your own business. What do you know about John Estabrook?"

"Plenty," returned Violet in a shaken voice. "And particularly about Dan Scarlett and Estabrook a sister."

Becky dropped back into her chair gasping: "Oh, for heaven's sake, what's happened?"

"Enough and more. Listen, Becky McCloskey, I never double-crossed any one in my life, believe it or not But I'm fed up now. I've done Dan Scarlett's dirty work for too long. And now to be given the air for a pink faced ninny . . . it's too much, that's what it is . . . too damned much."

"I don't know what you're talking about."

"No, you wouldn't, Dolling. You're just another innocent young fool, ering the fact you think yourself so wise. What you don't know about Dan Scarlett would make a bigger book'n the Bible, and that's no joke."

"Gosh . . . I can't believe it After all, he's been pretty decent to me," Violet. He passed me an when I was near starving and gave me a start. And he didn't get anything for it, either."

"Well, don't kid yourself dolling, he means to get something. He's not giving anything away. That's his long suit . . . picking up helpless kids. I started that way too Y mayn't believe it, but I was straight once. And then things got hard, and I took a little outs pockets now and then. And one day I picked the wrong pocket, if you'll excuse the ill joke. I picked Dan Scarlett's and he, being wise to the game (against my hard on the west end I thought it was the jak outs But it was Mister Scarlett's attorney's second pad I was) to the Lord now it had been the other. His method is what you might call subtle and effective if you got what I mean He knocked the devil outa me first and then he fed me, and then he kissed me. And now I'm on the rum you can believe that I was ready to take my orders right there. Well, I did, I've done plenty for that baby, but now he's found something better and I'm let out."

He sy rubbed the back of her hand across her lips that were colorless. But she protested "What do you mean you did plenty"

Again Violet cautiously looked about her.

"Remember when our own little star gets back down, Sweet" she asked, burning her bridges at last Becky nodded dumbly. "Well, remember it was the Honorable Hollingham-Stevens, and friend of your best friend Estabrook, who got picked over the coals? Again Becky nodded.

"Well, Danny got ahold of Hildebrand's letters to Durfee, and believe me it cost Hildebrand a pretty penny to buy 'em back and keep outa that case. I did the nasty part of the business, and Danny went to Palm Beach on the profits. And as for you," she leaned forward and tapped Becky's arm. "You've been feeling pretty darn safe, but my job here has been to keep an eye on you, and you haven't made any moves for three months that haven't gone right to Florida way by special delivery."

Becky's hands clenched. "Oh how could you" How could you"

"You'll find the answer to that for yourself before long, if you try to buck the tide, my lady." Violet's voice was harsh. "It all in the way of business, and I wouldn't be tipping you off now if I wasn't mad clean through. Scarlett's got plenty on me. I having done the actual work, but I haven't anything on him. So it's easy enough for him to hand me a walk ne ticket when he was a chance for big money."

"The money . . . and little Nan"

"Nuts, thaten idea. Scarlett reads the papers like anyone else, and it's the talk of the town that young Miss Estabrook is due to marry the English Lord So I guess Dan figures your Johnny'd be glad to pay to keep this quiet."

"Keep what quiet" cried Becky in a breaking voice

"Don't you even know what's up? Why, dolling, this nice little girl's been slipping out every night and having these things they call chaperone meetings with Danny. And letters . . . but dog' Well" with a shrug, little movement, Violet slid into her coat "Now you know. Let your conscience be your guide, dolling."

Becky sat very still, her hand over her eyes.

"I'm hitting the trail for the coast dolling" said Violet "Leave tomorrow. And when the breaks I'll be well outa the way. So long, and I wish you luck."

"Oh, wait, wait," Becky moaned. "Please don't go yet I'm so scared Violet, I can't get this straight."

"Well, see your trains if you have any, Becky McCloskey. I've said my little piece."

"Oh, what shall I do?" Becky wailed, "what ever shall I do"

But she spoke to emptiness. For Violet had gone.

Tomorrow—Becky gets a startling declaration from Dan and is horrified.

How I get whiter, sweeter clothes

from my washing machine

UNTIL I tried Rinso, I never dreamt I could get such white and bright clothes from my washer.

And so easily, too! For now, no matter how soiled the clothes are, I never have to do a bit of hard rubbing, as I used to.

Even the most soiled cuffs, collar bands, hems, rompers, etc, come out so much whiter than ever before. And ordinary stains simply vanish.

Rinso saves money, too. For now never have to buy bar soaps, cleaning powders. Rinso is all I need. It makes cur water so soft and sudsy.

I can easily understand why the makers of 30 leading washers endorse Rinso. Just try it next washday!

These hands must not be published. Double Dummy, although four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

East, with five hearts to the King, Queen, Jack and a probable entry with the King of Diamonds, considers a pass the best defense against North's No Trump And so did Harris as an offensive measure, after his partner's pass would be sorry to warn the opponents of the Heart menace, and perhaps have them to a no bid offering a better chance than No Trump for game

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2 North takes the trick on the assumption that East held five hearts originally and West fourteen but two

Tricks 3 and 4. West holds off with his King on Trick 3, but must take it's next trick or lose his King Trick 5. Declarer cannot afford to lose another Diamond trick. He hopes by playing the remaining Clubs to force two discards to enable him to make a business of the Trick 7. To lose the finesse on the club trick is of little difference to Declarer that pass a round of Spades

Trick 10. Here is a difference of opinion as to the correct play. Declarer knows that West has started with three hearts and four Clubs, leaving him with but one Heart to lead away from. By leading the Queen up to Dummy's Ace, Declarer East decides that he is to discard the 8 of Hearts. He is correct in the hope that a second round of Spades will force West to discard the Heart. Declarer then leads the Heart Queen from Dummy and finesses. Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Fur—oh, by all means

To be quite smart this season your coat simply must be trimmed. It may have just a narrow band to match the color or it may be rich, luxurious collar, cuffs and all. It must be fur, that's settled. And here's the latest word in fur trimmings—Lehrburger & Asher are showing a wide variety of furs in the Avenue of Chanic and Bedford Street floors, the most exquisite furs for the most exacting prices. Let them show you how to bring your last year's cloth coat up to the minute style by adding a little fur. Or how to change an outmoded coat into a stunning fur-trimmed model. They have the ideas—and a thrilling variety of furs by the yard—and, best of all, the most moderate prices

IS A HEALTHIER STRONGER GIRL

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible thru the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Miss Schmidt gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes, "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 113 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon. For sale by all druggists.

FRISBY RIPS LID OFF LETHARGY IN CAPITAL

Finds Halls of Congress Locked and People's Servants Missing

The Washington Monument, which Mr. Frisby so aptly describes in today's dispatch.

(Reading time, half an hour)

BY MR. FRISBY

Our Staff Correspondent

Washington, D. C.—I was astounded, on reading the papers this morning, to discover that Congress is not in session. Nor has Congress been in session for weeks. I was boiling mad, I can assure you.

"See here!" said I, clapping my hands in Mrs. Frisby's face, "the people shall know about this."

She said nothing, but I knew by the way she felt that she would, if need be, back me up. In fact, she did back me up. We had one of those little arguments that, I suppose, mar the happiness of many married couples. I accused her of familiarity with a certain elevator operator in this city. One thing led to another, and before I knew it I was kicking her in the shins and she was cuffing me.

It must be said to Mrs. Frisby's credit that she denied any wrong, so far as the elevator operator was concerned. She said she did not even know his last name.

I decided to let it go for the time being and take her up on the Washington Monument. She whimpered a bit, saying she feared I might push her off. I was so disgusted I didn't even give her a civil answer.

"What are you doing at lunch time?" The girl kidded a while and finally dared me to meet her. Imagine my embarrassment, half an hour later, when she turned out to be my wife. J. Caspar Oakes.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND.

A MAN'S virtue is usually determined by the number of temptations that don't happen to come his way and don't seem worth going after.

To a Summer Love.

Alas, that Summer love should fade so soon—
Should vanish with the waning harvest moon!
Oh, little love, so faint, so frail, so fair,
Cut I but hold you—would I really care?

Go, little love! You were not meant to last!
So, light, you left no footprint as you passed—
But just a sound of singing in the air—
A touch of star-dust, where he kissed my hair!

Almost any normal woman can extract more spiritual comfort out of a beautiful compliment than out of a beautiful sermon.

It is difficult to discover when a man manages to earn his living, since he appears to spend one-quarter of his life in falling in what he calls "love," and the other three-quarters in crawling out of it.

Before marriage, a man can't seem to "make conversation" without making love; after marriage he can't seem to make it without making criticisms.

Sooner or later Don Juan discovers that a whole carload of cheap kisses and petting parties isn't worth one honest, thrilling love affair, any more than a basketful of scraps is worth one good yard of whole cloth.

Take, if you must, O Fate, all these—
The things for which I've worked and sold me;
But leave, ah leave my MEMORIES
Sweet as the little lies he told me!

There comes a point beyond which a man can't go on fooling even a woman who is trying to fool herself.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

BOOZE is being shipped into this country so plentifully that most of the large railroads and express companies now have Luggage Listeners.

THEY keep their eyes on our hips and their ears on our grips.

ONE porter spent three hours the other morning trying to make a trunk gurgle.

IT was marked "Montreal" and had come from Canada for no good reason.

THE contents were a secret, but the secret was beginning to leak out.

HE telephoned a couple of prohibition agents, but they were busy drinking in some other part of town.

THESE revenue men are smart.

They know that a bird in the hand is worth two swallows in a baggage room.

THE fellow who owned the trunk swore he was a mining engineer and said that it contained quarts.

IT probably did, because all the prohibition officers began to arrive for the gold rush.

DOSSESSION is nine pints of the law.

ONE rum-runner used to bring all his stuff to New York in a valise. He had a lot of power but he finally lost his grip.

HE was an outside man with inside information.

HE'S in the tailoring business now.

He invented a pair of trousers for revenue agents. The pants have non-refillable pockets.

HE'S gone from wet goods to dry-goods.

HE also has a profitable side line.

He sells gloves to the Anti-Saloon League.

HE received three trunks of vests last week and the cork never came out of one of them.

YOU'VE got to give the express company credit. They certainly carry their liquor well.

OF course, they hold any piece of baggage that looks suspicious.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you almost 95 per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Whiskey used to grow old in wood, but now they let it age in leather.

EVANGELINE ON MAIDEN TRIP

The Evangeline, the second of two sister ships recently launched from the Cramp Shipyards at Philadelphia arrived at Eastern Steamship Terminals, Boston, from New York yesterday. The ship is twin screw, turbine driven, 378 feet in length, 55 foot beam and a draught of 29 feet.

The main entrance lobby is also the community centre where clerk room, newsstand, barber shop and purser's office is located. Here also are placed the bulletins giving information regarding various activities aboard ship. The walls are panelled in mahogany and the large comfortable club chairs and settees upholstered in brown Spanish leather make one feel as though they were in the lobby of a hotel rather than on shipboard. The dining saloon is located forward on the upper deck and is panelled in mahogany and old ivory with a touch of rust and gold.

There are 248 staterooms including ten special suites panelled in mahogany. Seventy have couch berths in addition to the regular upper and lower berths while other staterooms have ¾ width lower berth and an upper folding berth. Every room is equipped with hot and cold running water.

HOTEL ARLINGTON HAS NEW SPANISH ROOM

With the opening of the Spanish and Garden Rooms at the Hotel Arlington for dining and dancing, George E. Clark, manager, has introduced an innovation at reasonable expense. The amusement furnished by a five-piece orchestra (you just can't make your feet behave) located upon a hanging balcony in the Spanish Room, was designed by Frank Chouteau Brown, widely-known Boston architect.

The full course dinner is being served from six to nine, from nine to twelve a la carte—both at very reasonable prices and without cover charge. Dancing may be enjoyed every evening during dinner and after theatre in the Garden Room which overlooks a wall garden with fountain and pool in the centre and adjoins the Spanish Room.

B. & M. EXCURSION OVER MOHAWK TRAIL OCT. 9

Announcement of the Boston & Maine Railroad's Autumnal excursion to North Adams, Mass., Sunday, October 9th, should meet with public favor. This excursion train over the Mohawk Trail, along the route of the nationally known "Minute Man," takes you through the Berkshire Hills at one of the most beautiful times of the year.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Keeping the Boys at Home

A NEW ENGLAND Problem

One of several problems to which the New England Council will give due attention in the coming months is that of how to keep YOUNG New Englanders IN New England.

It will never be done by the building of Chinese walls, or the community singing of "You'd Better Stay at Home, Lad"; they have got to be shown that here is opportunity.

Vice-President Dudley Harmon, addressing representatives of the Federated Women's Clubs at Burlington, Vt., described New England's need of the enthusiasm and pioneering ability of her young men in the creation of a new period of enterprise, prosperity and progress:

"New England cannot ask its young men to stay here on the basis of sentiment. It can ask them to stay only by showing them that they are truly needed here, that there is real opportunity for them, and that there is ROOM IN OUR OWN BUSINESS ENTERPRISES for them to bring to bear all their enthusiasm, their ideas and their abilities."

To deal most effectively with such conditions as prevail today in industry, as Mr. Harmon observed, calls for the youthful instinct for pioneering.

What the New England Council aims at is to stimulate the institutions and organizations of the Six States to "activities and a viewpoint" which will make them attractive to those who make up New England's GREATEST asset, her ambitious youth.

True enough, it was a son of the Granite State who advised the youth of another day to "Go West, young man!" but that was when Uncle Sam was "rich enough to give us all a farm."

Times have changed, conditions with them. If Greeley were alive he would be sitting in with New England's councillors, exhorting his young friends to observe that, in an age of industrial competition, New England possesses all the advantage that goes with a century of undisputed leadership.

The call is for new products, new methods, as well as for new—that is to say, young—men.

Or, it may be, for new men with new methods for the creation of new products.

As Mr. John S. Lawrence reminded us, in his speech at Poland Springs, New England industry was founded upon the development of new products and new ways of making established products. "Yankee ingenuity and inventiveness not only met, but ANTICIPATED, the demand for manufactured goods."

There is always danger that men and institutions will get into a rut. It may be that our elder industrialists have become too "set" in their ways. Enter, at a critical moment, Youth, open-minded, ambitious, eager, confident, fearless.

In two years, the wisdom of the six Governors who called the New England Council into being has been proved a score of times, at least. All that the Council HAS accomplished, however, will be as nothing beside the achievement of such an objective as Mr. Harmon described at Burlington.

Will It Be YOUR Child?

One in Every 200 Goes to Jail; a Wise Social Chemist Must Find a Real Remedy

Is your boy or girl one of two hundred? Basil Thompson of London has given us the pleasant contemplation of every two hundredth person in the United States spending a term in jail. We learn from another authority that crime in the United States is costing us as a people $3,000,000,000 yearly, and possibly a few cents over.

Statistics often tell us unsavory stories. Cleveland has its civic centre and beautiful buildings and parks. But we read that Cleveland in 1919 had more robberies and assaults than England and Wales. In the same year, in Chicago, there were 110 murders for every million inhabitants, as against 9 for Great Britain and 13 for Canada.

Those who have children to bring up are growing serious for fear their child may be the two hundredth, and that some jail is waiting for him or for her. Tell us if you can, Mr. Statistician, why the crime wave in the United States still waves, and men kill one another?

The commission selected to study this question, including what they are doing in England, Germany and France to bring down crime, now may step up to our prison doors, point the finger of warning, and say "Shame." The men and women on the commission believe they have learned a few things from across the water, where crime is evidently on the decrease, except possibly in Germany.

They say over there the law-breaker and wrong-doer have their cases attended to immediately, and usually are punished or treated in some way. They know when they offend against the laws they will in all probability get drastic attention. The punishment is not severe for first offences, but it comes with terrible certainty, and comes not long after the youth offends.

Professional crooks, in their Summer touring trips, avoid England. They ship as soon as possible to America, where with a clever lawyer they often go free on technicalities, or through long delay and a wise expenditure of swag. "Park here," say our cities to professional crooks. As far back as 1909 Massachusetts paid from its taxes $1,556,708.45 to care for the jails and prisons, and it cost Uncle Sam $2,500,000 daily for the same kind of a board bill.

Fifty per cent. of all prison inmates are there for at least a second time; many for the fourth and fifth time. It looks as though we did not do much to reform the boys and girls.

The crime mixture—say a cup of the crime wave analyzed—shows the waters of life pretty riley with poison sediment precipitating steadily to the underworld. We need a wise social chemist to purify the cup.

BEAUTIFUL STORIES OF ST. FRANCIS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

At the national encampment of the Bohemian Club at Bohemian Grove was held a pageant in honor of St. Francis Assisi, after whom San Francisco was named. Lawrence Tibbett, of Metropolitan opera fame, sang the leading role, that of St. Francis Assisi. There were 165 characters, all of them played by members of the club.

Saint Francis has always been the one saint of the church of whom I am particularly fond. He represented the spirit of Christianity.

His business was loving. He truly was a great lover and loved everything, including the inanimate objects of nature.

The stories about him are very beautiful, how the birds came to hear him preach and the little wild animals ran to him for refuge. Some men seem to understand and to attract the animals, and Saint Francis was one of them. He spent his whole life in the business of doing good. His one marriage was to espouse her whom he called Lady of Poverty, and his conduct with all men was such as we would expect from a true Christian.

Many of the saints were combative in their nature. Perhaps that was necessary in their time, but this saint devoted himself to the one thing that will eventually save mankind, and that is love.

He even composed a hymn to the sun, speaking of him as our brother Sun, for he claimed kinship to all things that God had made. This is going the evolutionists one better.

Love is a peculiar thing. It is the toughest thing in the world. It will outlast all hate. Suppressed in one place it will come up in another. It performs herculean tasks, tasks that are impossible.

It did away with human slavery among civilized peoples and with dueling. In time it will do away with war.

No man can make a mistake by committing himself to love and taking such a man as Saint Francis Assisi for his patron.

Douglas Malloch says:

"Steel will break or steel will hold, but love is never broken,
Even when the heart is cold, the final word is spoken.
Threads of gold may seem to rend, but love will yet discover
That nothing's final to a friend nor ended to a lover."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

'Twas his folly, so men said that kept him at his humble task,
day in, day out, while swift years
sped; a loftier lot he did not ask.
Nor did he look to distant lands to glimpse the loveliness of earth; instead, he found beneath his hands enough of beauty and worth. It was his folly not to seek the friendship of the great and wise; he gave his service to the weak, gained gladness from their grateful eyes.
The worldly-minded could have told of many ways to aid his case, to bring him men's esteem and gold, to set him in a higher place. It was his folly, though, to meet with patience what the years had sent;
and so his folly made life sweet and kept him ever well-content.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHAT will happen after you die? Sir Oliver Lodge thinks you will go on growing.

He believes that death is just another sort of birth and that just as we took on one type of a body when we came into this present existence, so we will take on finer, freer bodies when we "graduate" into the next existence.

Sir Oliver Lodge doesn't think that we will graduate into angels or devils—he thinks that we will live then much as we live now—only much more freely and powerfully for we will have dropped our clumsy bodies. He believes that the real self in us which dreams and loves and struggles and rejoices is not a matter of flesh and bone—it only inhabits the flesh and bone and uses them as temporary tools. The tools may wear out, but Sir Oliver Lodge does not believe that the Real Self can ever wear out. He thinks that it will simply go on growing and developing, making many mistakes as it did in this life, doing some mischief perhaps, but growing wiser and stronger all the time.

Sir Oliver Lodge doesn't think that we're "saved" or "damned" when we die—nor does he think that the next life is either heaven or hell. He thinks that it is just More Life. And he believes that it would be quite possible for another life to be going on here, without our seeing it.

"We are not living in a material world," he says. "We are living in a spiritual world and people so qualified to know it feel it in their bones that at times we get visions of something more.

"I tell you we are not isolated on this planet. There is a vast reality beyond. We are get the highest beings in creation. We are only the highest on this particular planet. Darwinism is merely an attempt to show the automatic development of life. If we limit ourselves to the evidence of our five senses, we are no better than animals."

We do not know whether Sir Oliver Lodge is right, although he brings many amazing scientific facts to support his argument. But it has a comforting theory and it is much more sensible than most theories about life or death. It's hardly reasonable to suppose that man's spirit will be snuffed out in a few years after he has come such a long way, in his evolution. I prefer to think that I'm just a Growing Thing, on my way.

When the thought of death terrifies you, or your heart is breaking over the loss of some loved one, try to think of it that way. A Growing Thing, going on, in the natural process of its development. Changing to a spirit, as a pollywog changes to a frog.

DON'T GIVE UP TOO SOON; KEEP ON TRYING

By J. J. MUNDY

SINCE you have passed a certain age, you are allowing yourself to think you are too old for work which you are still able both mentally and physically to perform.

Are you by these thoughts driving yourself to the human discard?

Just because certain persons you know are not able at your age, through lack of physical strength, to do the special work you can do, are you going to conclude that it is time for you to stop?

Because those who hold positions requiring the activity your job demands are mostly younger men, does that signify that it is time for you to retire?

It is easy to think yourself into becoming a has-been.

It may be considerable of a struggle for you to retain the place you have, but, by give it up before it is necessary!

Once you permit yourself to slip backward, it is easy to keep slipping.

Keep on delivering the goods as long as you can. "Wear out but don't rust out."

GARRETT SERVISS ON LUCK AND CHANCE

By Garrett P. Serviss

I HAVE received a letter from a young man who is in despair over his "bad luck." He has long kept up heart and hope, the struggle becoming ever more bitter, and now he cries out for light and guidance.

If the light can be kindled to burn in his own mind, it may become, for him, a lamp amidst his darkness; but if he merely glances at it as a passing phenomenon it will do him little good.

The primary error is in confounding chance, which we may regard as a method of nature, with luck, which is an invention of human fancy. Chance has been subjected to mathematical analysis, not complete, but satisfactorily as far as it goes. Insurance companies exist on the "laws of chance," or the "theory of probabilities." So does Monte Carlo. Both are profitable for the same reason—THEY DO NOT BELIEVE IN LUCK.

It is a great eruption of personal vanity when a man assumes that Chance has become either his friend or his enemy, under the name of "Luck."

In its simplest form the theory of probabilities decrees that in throwing a die each of its six sides has an equal chance of turning up, and the value of that chance is 1-6th. But if you actually throw the dice you may find, say, 6 turning up twice in succession, and then not appearing again in twenty throws. How reconcile that with the law? The reply is that each throw is independent of both its predecessor and its follower. The law also tells you that if you wish to know what is the chance of two sixes turning up together (when the dice are thrown simultaneously) you must square the number in other words multiply 1-6th by 1-6th, obtaining 1-36 as the value of the chance. Yet here again in actual practice you will find the law continually violated.

The final reply to all these capricious exceptions is that the law is based on the average of a vast number of cases. If you only throw often enough, the chances, in the long run, will become equal. The man who flatters himself that he is the favorite of Fortune, likewise he who sinks under the baseless conviction that Fortune has cast an evil spell over him, are both equally mistaken. Each has fallen into a current of chance that is certain in the long run to change—unless its direction depends upon some special influence, in which case chance is no longer concerned. Thus, if the dice are "loaded," chance is eliminated, accidental circumstances are equally effective.

In ordinary affairs specific ability takes the place of loaded dice in counteracting the tendencies of chance. Mere belief in luck is in itself a terrible handicap, for it destroys the best weapon that man possesses in the struggle of life, viz., perseverance.
